It emanates from the soul. It inspires discovery, enrichment, and life's great adventures. Passion illuminates and energizes, freeing the spirit to create and accomplish monumental feats. Whether it's sailing the ocean, painting a portrait or mastering a sonata, passion is the driving force that brings it all to life. So, too, a passion for excellence in residential design and building is the foundation of every home created by James V. Zizzi. From meticulous detail inside and out, to a harmonious blend of dwelling and environment, a home by James V. Zizzi exudes a passion for perfection. Live your dreams in a home by James V. Zizzi. Mortgage Matters

You can still get a good mortgage.

"As the press continues to sensationalize the mortgage meltdown nationwide, we need to remember that our NY Metro Marketplace is in much better shape than most of the rest of the country. Yes there are clearly many changes being made by banks on a daily basis and more banks will fold - and some types of loans are harder to get today than they were even just a week ago - but the mortgage market is not broken - it is correcting and we cannot lose sight of the many lenders, especially our portfolio lenders, that continue to offer COMPETITIVE rates and mortgages to all sectors of the marketplace.

- You CAN still get a No-Income Verification loan
- You CAN still borrow 90% on a mortgage – in fact there are still lenders allowing 100%
- You CAN get a fixed rate at 6.75% with 0 points up to $1 million
- Banks ARE still lending on super jumbo loans – no loan size too large
- You CAN still get a home equity loan
- You CAN still get financing for an investment property

YOU CAN STILL GET A GOOD MORTGAGE.

Yes, the playing field has changed and many of the banks that we have done business with over the years are going through a period of correction and they will be back but, in the meantime, we have a large number of portfolio lenders that are ready to lend money and they have not increased their rates. We are simply going back to doing business the old fashioned way – and this is a good thing for the future of the Real Estate Market."

A Detailed Account of the Artists-Writers Game Last Saturday

By Dan Rattiner

Saturday, August 18 was the most perfect day to hold the annual Artist-Writers softball game in East Hampton. The temperature was in the low 70s. The day was sunny. All the foliage in town was in bloom. And not far away, the Yankees were charging hard at the Red Sox for first place in the American League and the Mets were in first place in the other league, holding off the Phillies. Baseball was in the air. And our guys were doing just great.

Just before three o'clock — the time when the game would begin there on the sandlot field in the park behind Waldbaums — the Artists and Writers held batting practice, slapping the softball this way and that, with the fielders making diving catches into the dust of the infield or heading back for fly balls to the snow fence defining the outer reaches of the ball field to bring down long drives. Many of the participants had not seen each other during the previous year. Others, such as Donny Deutch and Kaylie Peters, were new to the game and were welcomed with handshakes and slaps on the back. T-shirt and hotdog vendors were walking about.

The crowds of people were filing in and sitting in the bleachers or setting up chairs along the sidelines. And there was, along the third base line, a new addition to the game, which seemed to have been a result of a debate held earlier in the week by some of the village officials of the town. Two rows of yellow crime tape, stretched tight, defined the point in front of which, for their own safety, spectators should not go — in foul territory down the third base line and all the way to the left field wall. Meanwhile, in deference to the fact that there are usually fewer foul balls down the first base line side, there was on that side of the field no such corresponding yellow tape.

Photographers were everywhere. Behind the backstop, boxing commentator Bert Sugar held forth.

HAMPTONS BOY HITTING .300 & BATTING 5th FOR KC

By Fred Katz

Ross Gload, the former East Hampton High School baseball star, has finally hit his stride as a Major Leaguer. Gload was hitting .257 as a reserve player for the Kansas City Royals until July 23. But when his hometown Yankees came to Kansas City, Gload began to turn it on. Gload went 3 for 4 on July 24 against the Bombers. He has not cooled down since. In fact, he has hit a sizzling .357 since the All-Star Break and has now raised his average to an even .300 and earned a starting spot at first base. His slugging percentage has risen 68 points to .475 since that July 24 game against the Yankees. If he keeps this up, the Royals' new number five hitter will be a force in the American League.

Gload's road to the Major Leagues was not easy. Usually, players drafted out of high school will spend a significant amount of time in the Minor Leagues before being called up to the majors. This gives them time to sharpen their fundamentals and develop their raw skills. The riper players, the college players, usually do not spend as much time in the Minor Leagues, as they have four more years of baseball experience and have developed, both mentally and physically. Therefore, Gload, as a college ball player, did not expect to spend more than only a couple of years in the Minor Leagues coming out of college. However, it took him four long Minor League years before he could make it to the Majors.

In 1997, Gload was signed by scout Dejon Watson and made his professional debut at Advanced Rookie Utica, part of the New York-Penn League (Class A). The next year, Gload started to make an impact to his team for the first time, leading the league in doubles. He was named "Star of Stars", the MVP honors of the league All-Star Game.

"I've been told that the number of photographers at the game this year has set a new Artist-Writers record," he said.

Three great beauties, model Christie Brinkley, actress Laurie Singer and TV personality B. Smith, were suited up for the game and posing for the herds of photographers. There were flashes and clicking noises and "thank yous" and autographs.

The game began with a thundering attack by the Artists, including wallops by Jeffrey Meizlik, Eddie McCarthy, and John Longmeyer. Before it ended, four runs had come in. But it didn't seem fair. Mort Zuckerman, the pitcher for the Writers, was pitching a good game it seemed to me, but the ball was just going where his fielders weren't. Tough luck. The runners ran around.

I was the umpire calling balls and strikes behind the mound on this gorgeous afternoon, and I commiserated with Zuckerman as once again an easy grounder went just wide of a fielder's outstretched glove. Well, it was just the beginning of the game.

In the bottom of the first, the Writers really belted around the new pitcher for the Artists, landscape architect Joe Sopiak, the replacement for actor Roy Scheider, who was off on a shoot in Europe and could not get home on time for the game.

But the balls, hard hit by the Writers as they were, landed squarely in the Artists' gloves. And there were two really spectacular diving stops of ground balls by Artist Eric Ernst at shortstop, both of which were converted into outs. The Writers went down without being able to score.

An interesting bit of commentary from Bert Sugar accompanied one blow by the Writers in the bottom of the first. It had been a high fly ball to center. Keep in mind that there was almost no wind on this most gorgeous day.

"There's a drive! The centerfielder is going back — way, way back. And he makes the catch."

The centerfielder, Eddie McCarthy, had taken a few steps back at the crack of the bat, then made a better judgment of the arc of the ball and jogged in to catch it, just behind second base. Sugar, apparently, did not have on his glasses.

I did my best to umpire this game from behind the mound, but it wasn't easy. It never is. At the slightest possibility of anything, the players, many of whom are competitive to the point of turning red in the face and screaming at the slightest close call that does not come their way, are all over us umpires, bursting out of the sidelines and running onto the field to confront us. Then Lief Hope, the organizer of the game, runs out shouting to support whatever decision we have made and sometimes, I just feel like saying, "look, I got the last ten things right. I don't get any compliments for those, do I?" But then, umpires are just supposed to stand their ground and take it. It's a tough job.

Without a doubt, the most controversial play of the day came with a terrific shot down the right field line and over the fence by adventurer Richard Weise in the bottom of the sixth.

Weise is one of the great power hitters of the game. He hit a home run in the fourth and on another occasion, sent a screaming line drive directly at my head behind the mound, which spun me around like a top trying to get out of its way.

(Later, I learned that this shot had not been from him, but had been a whack by Jeff Meizlik. But at the time, I had believed it was Weise. Honestly, when it happened, it knocked whoever had hit it right out of my head. So there I was, calling balls and strikes on Weise and hiding behind the landscape architect still pitching. Let him take the hit.)

In any case, there was one out and one man on and the Writers behind 6-3 when Weise came up, so this shot seemed very important at the time.

It was a tremendous drive, hit so far over the fence that it nearly struck a goal post that marked the end of the football field that defined the opposite end of the park. But it was right down the line. Fair? Or foul?

On this wonderful day, I had been all over the infield, looking for possible upcoming close calls. Someone would hit a single to left with a runner on second, I'd head for home to be ready for a play there. Someone would hit a bouncer to third with a man on first, I'd scoot toward second to watch both that base and first. I was doing my job.

On this particular occasion, I was, however, holding a turnip. Now how that had come about

Clean Mouth Better Health - The Perils of Periodontal Disease

- Periodontal disease attacks the gums and the bone supporting the teeth in the jawbones, thereby leading to loss of teeth. To eliminate gum inflammation, treatment consisting of scaling, root planing and curettage - which is essentially cleaning the teeth well - is required.
- If periodontal pockets persist, periodontal surgery may be indicated. Receding gums are another frequently overlooked problem that requires treatment; periodontal surgery can be performed to improve appearance when there is an abundance of gum tissue.
- Numerous studies have linked periodontal disease with heart disease, diabetes, low birth weight babies, pancreatic cancer, obesity and osteoporosis. Periodontal disease can be a chronic condition which requires ongoing care. Professional periodontal treatment is an investment in the health of your mouth and your overall well-being.

INTRODUCING PIEZOSURGERY® PRECISION DENTISTRY TO LONG ISLAND

Improve your life with Dental Implants
BY DR. HOWARD POPPER & DR. JASON POPPER

PiezoSurgery® is the new dimension in bone surgery. This revolutionary technique for Periodontal surgery and Implant Dentistry provides trauma free, precise and safe treatment.

Chances are, whether you have lost one tooth or several, whether it is a new situation or something you have lived with for years, you have never become fully accustomed to losing such a vital part of yourself.

Now you can have replacement teeth that look, feel and function like natural teeth. Advances in dental science allow your dentist to offer artificial tooth roots which fuse with the jawbone to form a secure foundation for tooth replacement.

What happens when you lose a tooth?

If you are missing one tooth or more, you may find there are other things you miss. You may miss your natural smile. And when was the last time you crunched into an apple or sank your teeth into a mouth-watering steak? Maybe you feel self-conscious about eating or speaking in public. Perhaps your remaining teeth are shifting, or you suffer from muscle strain or headaches. Do you miss the comfort you once experienced in familiar situations at work, home, or with friends?

Naturally, the effects of tooth loss vary from person to person and depend on what has been lost. If you have lost a crown, you have lost the visible part of your tooth. If you have lost the root as well, you have lost the unseen part of your tooth and indeed the most important part. The root anchors the tooth to your jawbone providing support for the crown. Without the root, the bone around the missing tooth will gradually recede, remaining teeth will shift, and chewing will become more difficult with time.

For those who have lost all of their teeth in an upper or lower jaw, the long term problems are even greater. Because bone shrinks after tooth loss, nerves become exposed and dentures lack support. Loose fitting dentures compound problems and lead to sore gum tissue and additional pain.

Traditional periodontal and implant therapy available with intravenous sedation, administered by certified anesthesiologists.

Viewing the Stars through the Big New Telescope in Montauk

By Dan Rattiner

Last Sunday night, at nine p.m., my girlfriend and I drove out to Montauk to the Theodore Roosevelt State Park where, in the darkness of a field there, we were told that a brand-new telescope on display, set up so that anyone who stopped by could look through the eyepiece and see the planets and stars, up-close and personal.

The telescope is the brainchild of Jay Schneiderman, whose family owns the Breakers Resort and Cottages in that town and who has pursued a career as a local politician, winning the Supervisorship of East Hampton for two terms, and then getting elected for two terms as a County Legislator representing this area. He is a popular man that people like and look to, and he is always full of ideas about what might or might not good for our community.

Schneiderman is the man who got the idea to put a telescope in Montauk — actually, the idea is to have a full-blown Observatory — about three years ago, when someone told him that this very powerful telescope from the observatory of the ill-fated Bio-Dome in New Mexico would be up for sale at the bargain price of $250,000.

Schneiderman went about persuading everybody that this would be a really good idea for the Theodore Roosevelt County Park in Montauk because there are so few lights in that park and the stars in the sky are just awesome. He got no argument. And when the time came, the vote to buy the telescope went through. And here it was, the first use of this telescope on the stage set of Montauk.

We drove up the driveway toward Second House, the historic Inn where Teddy Roosevelt and General Shaftner headquartered their troops while overseeing maneuvers at Montauk in 1898. But halfway up the driveway, off to the left, I saw what I was sure was the evening's performance. There was the faint glow of red neon tubing coming from a clearing just outside

WAIT OUT GLOBAL WARMING IN THE HAMPTONS

By Dan Rattiner

As the twenty first century moves on, global warming will worsen, as I am sure you know. Lucky for us, however, it will worsen faster elsewhere in the world than in the Hamptons. We are very lucky indeed.

This past week, a group called the National Center of Atmospheric Research based in Washington completed a study in which they merged the predictions of five different computer modelers around the world. Here are the results.

Hardest hit here in America will be California. In the rest of the world, the countries that border the Mediterranean — such as Italy, France, Egypt and Libya — are going to get it bad, as will Australia and Brazil.

One of the biggest changes in the weather will be in the tropical Pacific Ocean where the rains will come with greater frequency and volume. As a result, California and Australia will get more severe rainstorms, as will, for some reason, Brazil, even though it is on the opposite coast.

As for the Atlantic, the direction of the Gulf Stream will be slightly altered as it passes near to Africa, but the change which will also mean heavier downfalls of rain, which will mostly affect the Mediterranean region, especially the countries that border that sea.

As for the Atlantic coast of the United States, there is nothing especially interesting to report, except that there will be a greater tendency toward warmer night temperatures. By 2099, warm night temperatures will come about once a month, rather than once every six months as they do now. There will also be more heat waves in the summertime, but both the heat waves and the warm nights can be dealt with by the simple expedient of turning up the air conditioning. And that's that. Also, an outbuilding on the property. There were perhaps a hundred cars parked neatly in rows in a gravel parking lot. It was an eerie sight.

"That's got to be it," is what I said.

And it was.

We stumbled out of the car — this was indeed a very dark landscape without anything to light our way — and headed toward the red glow by holding out our cell phones upside down in front of us and watching where we stepped by the light of the screens of our cell phones.

The telescope could not be missed. It was about ten feet tall, sat on an enormous tripod, and was about as big around as a rain barrel. It was pointing, if you could call it that, at a bright star in the sky.

"I don't see it," a man was saying, peering through the eyepiece.

An astronomer holding an electronic remote control was alongside him, monitoring him.

"It's very faint," he said. "Like the powder from a doughnut."

"There it is," the man said. "There it is."

About fifteen people stood patiently in line to get their peek through the eyepiece. We got in the back.

"So what is this?" a woman asked as she got to the telescope.

"It's an entire galaxy exploding. It's ten million lightyears away."

"Oh."

"Why can't we look at Jupiter?" the next person, an older man, said. "It's right over that itty bitty exploding galaxy."

After Ten Years, Our Towns Learn How to Party Responsibly

By Dan Rattiner

The Town of East Hampton has come a long way in figuring out how to have a major party. Last weekend, they approved of a private party for 250 people at the home of P. Diddy in the Northwest Woods facing out towards Gardiner's Bay. Almost nobody objected.

It was just nine years ago that P. Diddy, who then called himself Puff Daddy, held a party in this town for just about the same number of people, and it was a huge mess.

Let us recall how things were handled in the summer of 1998. There was not only the Puff Daddy party, but also another party, or series of parties, that summer over a long weekend that sort of brought the house down. The result of this second party was that the Secret Service took over the town, Georgica Pond got drained of all its water and the people running the party ran off with about $4 million.

But first, there was the Puff Daddy party.

At the time, Hip-Hop was new on the national stage — there was an element of danger about it and several Hip-Hop stars had been shot and killed just the year before. And so Puff Daddy marched into town with his girlfriend Jennifer Lopez and announced they were going to have a White Party on the Fourth of July.

The issuance of town permits for large private gatherings was a new thing at the time. Many people felt it was somehow against the freedom of assembly laws in the constitution and there was much debate about this. But there was a party permit issued for Puff Daddy, whose security crew, the town was reassured, would be stopping all cars a block or two from the gates of Puff Daddy's house to make sure they weren't harboring any gate crashers. Mike Zimet, head of security, told the Town that by using this procedure, they'd be able to keep the party under 250 people.

On the night of the party, however, crowds of people and papparazi swarmed over the neighborhood. Thousands of uninvited guests showed up to bang on the gates of Puff Daddy's house on Hedges Banks Road. Hedges Banks Road was gridlocked for many hours and afterward, it turned out that several babysitters in this quiet residential neighborhood were

FEARING MARTHA STEWART WILL STEAL THE TOWN

By Dan Rattiner

Some residents up in Katonah, New York are raising money to file a lawsuit against Martha Stewart. They are afraid Martha, who has a house in Katonah, is going to steal their town.

Because Martha has a house in East Hampton — and what happens in Katonah might not necessarily stay in Katonah — I thought this situation was of some importance to the Town of East Hampton. East Hampton wasn't always named East Hampton. And I will get to that later.

The fact is, though, that Martha Stewart has filed papers to patent the name "Katonah." Her company has said that all she wants to do is have the exclusive rights to the name for use in her line of furniture, fabrics, linens, paint, hardware and some other stuff. The list is right there on their patent application for all to see, but the town residents are not so sure. The word going around at the Katonah Barber Shop and the Katonah Post Office is that she might be pulling a fast one. There are those that remember when a prominent Hollywood actress, Kim Basinger, bought an entire town eighteen years ago, stores and houses and all, and nearly bankrupted it before giving up on it ten years later.

There are also those who are familiar with the remarkable history of Katonah. Until 1890, the downtown village of Katonah was down in the Hudson Valley. But then, the State of New York bought Katonah in a condemnation proceeding and said they would deep-six it. They told the residents that the new Cross River Reservoir would flood the town in 1898, so you'd better get going. In 1896, the residents gave up fighting against the impending flooding and instead raised money privately to have the town moved. In 1897, the entire town — stores and houses and all about fifty buildings was because between innings, Leif Hope had handed it to me. It was heavy, painted white and slightly larger than a softball.

"You hold on to this," Leif whispered as he slipped it surreptitiously into my hand so the crowd couldn't see. "Umps carry softballs sometimes. Just watch for me. I'll give you the signal. You switch it with the pitcher's softball. He throws it. BAM."

As the infield warmed up — this was two batters before Weise was to come up — I gave the landscape architect a peek at the turnip.

"They want me to do WHAT?" he asked. As I said, Roy Scheider was away. The man was new.

"This game has been played for 59 consecutive years," I whispered. "It's a tradition. In the first game on Wilfrid Zogbaum's front lawn in 1948, Barney Rosset threw a turnip to Willem de Kooning. And, to his great surprise, since he thought it was a softball, he smashed it to smithereens."

"Oh," the landscaper said. He reached for my turnip.

"Not yet," I said. "I'll tell you when."

The first batter up, Hugo Lindgren, took two strikes and a ball. I was busy. How the hell do you hold a turnip in plain sight so nobody can see it, raise your right hand into the air to show the strikes, and your left hand into the air to show the balls? I kept thinking I ought to put something in my pocket, or clench something in my teeth, but I couldn't figure out what. Also, what if I dropped the turnip and it just exploded right there in back of the mound?

James Lipton

Meanwhile, I could not locate Hope to get the sign. He was nowhere to be seen.

With the count one and two, Lindgren singled, bringing up Weise. And so this is what I wanted you to know about the condition I was in there in back of the mound when Weise hit a long drive down the right field line.

The point is, I didn't take off on the run to get to the first base foul line to see if it was fair or foul. I had the damned turnip. I also did not react right away for another reason. The thought had flashed through my mind about how grateful I was that Weise had not hit a line drive at my head.

And so, I was only halfway over to the first base line when the ball came down alongside the goal posts. I thought — I have no idea. And I thought — thank goodness we have a first base umpire who could make the call. And then I thought, where is he?

The first base umpire (who shall remain nameless), for some reason, had decided before this ball was hit to lope over into shallow right field between first and second base. I do not know why he did this. He was out of position. So he couldn't make the call, either.

But he did. He was very forceful about it. He stuck out his left arm and pointed. And he shouted "foul ball."

And I thought, "Yes? No?" And then everybody was swarming all over the field.

The most competitive ball player on the field is, without a doubt, Mike Lupica, a 5' 6" sparkplug of a fellow who, in real life, is the star sportswriter for the New York Daily News. In prior years, he has been all over me about things. "You call that UMPIRING? This is CRAP!" Things like that.

And so he ran out and this is what he said to me.

"That ball was dead fair. Two runs brings us back into the ballgame. You should overrule your right field umpire when you see a bad call like that. Ask the catcher. Even HE says it was fair."

And I thought, holding the turnip there, that's a whole lot of words for this particular occasion coming from Mike Lupica. What has come over him?

And so, Weise trotted back to the plate and on the next pitch, hit a drive deep to right, but before the fence, which was caught. And so the Writers, after the next hitter grounded out, left the field, still behind 6-3, rather than 6-5.

And in the next inning, on the first pitch, Jeff Hilford smacked the turnip into a thousand pieces. And out on the mound, the landscaper and I hit each other a gleeful high-five.

And so it went.

In the top of the eighth inning, with the Artists still ahead by 6 to 3, the wheels came off the game for the Writers. Zuckerman had returned to pitching for the Writers, after a break, where Benito Vila pitched three successful innings and now, the Artists were banging the ball all over the lot.

It wasn't just luck now, as it had been in the top of the first. These were catchable balls missed, bad throws, fielders letting balls drop. It was awful. At one point, after a double scored two more runs, Zuckerman, holding the ball on the pitcher's mound, looked at his outfielders as the smoke cleared with a wan smile, and then turned to me and said one word. Zuckerman can be tough with people. But I have never heard him curse. Then he did.

"Sh-t," he said.

The inning ended with the posting of seven more Artists' runs, stretching their total to 13.

In the bottom of the ninth, my son David came up to hit for the Writers. This is the second year he has played in the game. And I have always looked forward to calling balls and strikes against him. But last year, he had popped out on the first pitch. And this year, again, he swung at the first pitch and popped out once again. Next year, before the game, I have to talk to him about waiting the first few pitches out.

Then Richard Weise came up again and belted a THIRD — no make it a SECOND — home-run over the right field fence. But it was too little, too late.

Final score: Artists 13, Writers 5.

After the game, up in the courtyard of the Lodge Restaurant, many of the players, all covered with dust and sweat, milled around at this traditional post-game get-together, drinking beer and taking about who did what and what might have been and so forth and so on.

And I walked up to the catcher for the Artists, Tom Clohessy, and asked him about the home-run ball down the right field line that Weise had hit in the bottom of the sixth.

"I saw it very clearly," he said. "It cleared the fence right over the metal post that secures the fence and is stuck in the foul line there. It is only three feet high. It would have been better if it were ten feet high, like a real foul pole, but it wasn't. And then the ball curved foul and it landed foul. So it was foul as far as I was concerned. Look — if it was a fair ball, I would have said so at the time."

I thanked him for his opinion. Then I thought, so he would sell out the Artists, a team he has played for during each of the past ten years straight, for the truth? I wasn't so sure about that. I was back to square one.

"Don't worry about it," he said. "Let me buy you another beer."

Leif Hope stood up and announced the results of the game, He announced that the Most Valuable Player of the game was Joe Sopiak.

And he also talked about the money raised for charity. Sponsors for the event had contributed nearly $80,000 for East End Hospice, East Hampton Day Care Center and the Phoenix House, the most money ever raised at this annual event. And everybody, red shirts and blue shirts, all together, let out a cheer. • unable to return home for the simple reason that their parents were unable to get through the traffic. The police, working under orders from Puff Daddy security, were stopping cars and nobody could get in or out. The sitters slept on couches where they were working.

Probably the most poignant image of that party was that of Colonel J. C. Barb, a World War II vet and neighbor of Puff Daddy, who sat in a lawnchair for the entire time the party was in progress, defending his driveway from interlopers who might either want to park on it or make K turns by driving down it. The police tried to get him to move. He refused. He stayed there in his lawnchair on his property, barking at the interlopers, for much of the night.

Inside the party, the music went on late into the night — way beyond the curfew hour — there were a lot of naked people running around and all the neighbors were unable to sleep because of the noise, which was finally brought to an end by the arrival of the Town police, instructed to come in by Mike Zimet.

Later that summer, Bill and Hillary Clinton came to town to raise money for what turned out to be the unsuccessful 1998 Presidential Campaign of Al Gore. Bill and Hillary stayed at the home of Steven Spielberg on Georgica Pond in East Hampton and those who attended said Bill and Hillary weren't on particularly good speaking terms inasmuch as the Lewinski affair had just taken place a few months before. The next day there was a reception held at the home of Alec Baldwin and Kim Basinger. There was another party at the home of another celebrity. Helicopters flew overhead. Secret Service men were all over town. And somebody illegally drained Georgica Pond — down to flies and mud — in the middle of the night, just before the Clintons arrived. (Was it so gawkers could not canoe out and take pictures of the Clintons at Spielberg's lawn? Who knew? Could a sitting President's Secret Service order that done? Nobody was ever arrested as a result of this.)

The next summer, two bachelor brothers with the last name of Wilzig held a giant bash at their "castle" in Water Mill, which I attended. The disconcerting thing about that was they had armed security guards with exposed weapons walking along patrolling on Deerfield Road — keeping "law and order," as you drove up toward the event.

Well, everyone's learned how to hold a party in the past nine years.

The P. Diddy party will take place between four p.m. and midnight, at which time it will be at an end. It will take place on Saturday night, September 3, on the same night that the Fourh of July fireworks, postponed from Independence Day because of Piping Plovers nesting on the beach, will be going off at Main Beach in downtown East Hampton. P. Diddy's representatives requested that the upcoming party Diddy was holding include a fireworks display of its own, shot off from a barge in Gardiner's Bay by the world's foremost fireworks firm, Grucci Brothers — but the town denied it on the grounds that where the barge would be set up and where boaters would drop anchor — is dangerously close to Hedges Banks, an area fraught with underwater rocks and boulders.

"We don't want to see somebody with a keel busted up on some rocks someplace," said councilman Brad Loewen.

As for the parking, well, there won't be any. All parking, even for the help, will take place in the field at the East Hampton Airport two miles away, where a team of shuttle busses will transport everyone to the party and back all evening. The busses are owned by the same firm that, for each of the past four weekends, has transported the occupants to a fundraising party at the Ross School in an orderly fashion. There, partygoers enjoyed performances by Prince, Billy Joel, the Dave Matthews Band and James Taylor.

Whether Colonel J. C. Barb will sit out in his lawn chair is not known. But clearly everyone has learned a whole lot on how to run a celebrity party. It's important to have these laws to guide everyone, even if they might press a little on our freedom of assembly. •

Walk Tall and Smile Out on the Beaches of Southampton

By David Lion Rattiner

Smile, you're on candid camera.

It was announced last week that Southampton Village is going to install live Internet cameras at Coopers Beach and at Agawam Park and that they have intentions of putting in more cameras in the future. The reason is so that police officers and village officials can keep an eye out for illegal activities that go on down at the beach. The cameras will provide live feeds to the village police department all of the time. This means that police will be able to monitor everything that goes on, including criminal acts such as vandalism or underage partying at the beach.

These cameras will also provide a live feed to anyone with a computer. This means that if you are not careful, you could become an online Internet porn star, if you do something you might only do in private. Be warned.

In all seriousness though, Mayor Mark Epley is truly taking some initiative and the program will be an excellent source of information and also an excellent deterrent for criminals. Last summer a rash of robberies started happening at beaches because people would walk on the beach and leave their purses or handbags in their cars and criminals would steal them. It took constant police surveillance in unmarked police vehicles and cooperation with both East Hampton police and Southampton police to bring the thieves to justice, but the process took a month. Having cameras there would have made such a case a lot easier and give police more manpower and more resources to focus on other crime in the area.

Everybody is talking about the advantages of having such cameras in Southampton, mainly for law enforcement purposes, but also, according to Epley, as a promotional tool for the village that will allow people to check the waves at the beach from their computers. They are also looking to have cameras setup where frequent ongoing vandalism happens.

And so, you can all breathe a sigh of relief

TRYING AGAIN TO AUCTION A HOUSE IN SAG HARBOR

By Christian McLean

Does anyone want to buy a dilapidated house held together with ancient nails and good old fashioned stubbornness? Going once? Going twice? All right, let's give it a third try... Any takers? At $900,000 ($200,000 less than the original auction price of two years ago) the now infamous Morpurgo property of Sag Harbor will be going back on the auction block on September 21.

Mark your calendars, as this should be another chapter in the story of a house that has brought a whole community together (some in a lawsuit filed by Annselem Morpurgo — others just to see what will happen next in the ongoing saga of two sisters and one very old house). While we may make light of the decaying residence and the $100 million lawsuit Annselem has fielded, claiming civil rights violations, the truth is, your tax money may be going toward attorneys for The Incorporated Village of Sag Harbor, the Village Police Department, the Sag Harbor Village Building Department and the Suffolk County Water Authority in the case. But there is more at stake than just money, there are people's lives.

The residence that started all this trouble sits on quiet Union Street, a minute's walk from Sag Harbor Village. The house holds historic value as a militia lodge from the 1700s, though it is not landmarked or preserved. It changed hands several times over the centuries and eventually the property was purchased by the Morpurgo family and then left to their two children, Helga and Annselem (or purchased from their estate by Annselem, depending on who you ask). The house has fallen into serious disrepair and has been deemed uninhabitable. It is rumored that the floors are caving in and the plumbing hasn't worked in years. It's like Grey Gardens, minus the aristocratic pedigree and cats. Helga wants to sell the house and move on, but Annselem is hell-bent on keeping it or selling a percentage of it at a price far beyond its assessed value.

While this seems like nothing more than a domestic dispute between two sisters, outlandish asking prices like a $100 million price tag on eBay a year ago gave the house national attention. Two unsuccessful public auctions held on the steps of Sag Harbor's Municipal Building have also created quite a buzz. Add to this the in Southampton because Big Brother is watching (insert scary music here) you.

With everything that is going on in the world, the news has sparked gossip in Southampton about privacy, especially in the wake of the new federal laws that allow the government to wiretap your telephone without a warrant. This can be scary stuff if you are talking about Sake Bombs at Mt. Fuji in Southampton on your cell phone and the next thing you know you are whipped up in a CIA helicopter for your first, or if you are a high roller, your ten thousandth helicopter ride out of the Hamptons. Only this time you are gagged and blindfolded.

But the program should do the village some good. After all, lots of places have cameras for security purposes. Nearly every business on Main Street keeps a security camera handy, as well as a lot of private homes in Southampton. So why not let the government do the same? As long as they are not putting cameras in the bathroom, I'm all for it. The real question is, will Southampton go too far?

Could these cameras be the start of a bigger, broader scheme of public control by Big Brother, I mean Southampton Village? You never know, it could be happening already. If you haven't noticed, it would appear that Southampton is already identifying who people are and where they are from. For example, if a Southamptonite is walking around town wearing Armani, Chanel, Gucci, Prada, Versace, or Ralph Lauren and are driving a Mercedes, BMW, Maserati, Ferrari, Audi or Lexus they are immediately labeled and identified by the local authorities and are ticketed. Oh sure, they say it is because they don't have a beach sticker or are parked in front of a fire hydrant, or are parked in one spot for too long but we all know the real reason.

Big Brother has gotten so bad in Southampton, that if your name isn't on a list at any sort of function or event in, you can't even get into it unless "they know who you are." If that's not Big Brother, I don't know what is.

Rodeo Drive East

The Gold, the Glitter, the Chic and the Dreams on Main Street

By Mike Vilensky

East Hampton's Main Street is one of the busiest blocks in the Hamptons. Walking down it on a sunny Saturday afternoon over the summer, one is treated to the fulfillment of every Hamptons cliché — women in chic glasses and white pants lunching outside at Cittanuova, old friends catching up with each other about their travels through Cannes and St. Tropez, good-looking young couples strolling by Ralph Lauren together and a few hip teenagers meandering around. The street has unarguably become the defining hotspot for Hamptons glamour to a near shameless degree.

While the rest of the East End may pride itself on unique boutiques and a relaxed atmosphere, East Hampton has boldly decided to forgo the façade of seaside subtlety and friendliness and paint itself as an over-the-top family shopping fantasyland for upper-echelon second home owners. And so, as the crowds have grown on Main Street, it has become an attraction unto itself. But with all the glitterati that's been brought to East Hampton in the past few years — the expensive, architecturally-fascinating stores, rare clothes, beautifully paved blocks and star sightings — who is really buying?

The Gucci store, now two years old, flaunts its one of a kind Gucci "Hamptons bicycle" in the window, equipped with a price-tag that's more than tenfold that of your sturdy Schwinn. The store also wows shoppers with a television displaying nonstop runway action from Gucci fashion shows. The old candy store at the beginning of town, Nuts about Chocolate, is, as of this June, a fun, family-friendly Dylan's Candy Bar, the mini candy fun-land of Ralph Lauren's daughter. Interesting fashion favorite Alice + Olivia On The Circle, has been replaced by fashion mainstay Jill Stuart. Elie Tahari has reopened his store in a larger location — replacing the old East Hampton post office. John Varvatos has opened a store with a plethora of hanging light bulbs coming together in the center, form-

SUNY SOUTHAMPTON GOES GREEN FOREVER IN 10 DAYS

By Alan Braveman

September of this year will be host to an exciting rebirth on the old Southampton College campus as Stony Brook Southampton inaugurates its first full year with the opening of the still being renovated campus. The residence halls will see more then 103 students in residence. The residence halls have been totally rehabbed to now include high-speed Internet access, air conditioning and cable television access. All the rooms have now been furnished with new furniture, including beds, chairs, bookcases and dressers for each student. The plumbing and wiring are also all new, along with a security system designed to provide maximum protection for resident students. The new Student Center, formerly Chester C.Wood Hall, has been stripped of its name and is undergoing massive renovations. A new entrance, a spanking new kitchen and a real Executive Chef will be ready to serve these pioneering students. At this time, the menu is being planned to reflect the choices and requests of the 250 students, (which includes those not living in the dorms,) who are now enrolled in this new college. There will be a fitness center operating by the time classes start, as well as a newly renovated Fine Arts center. The WLIU Radio Station will vacate its quarters in about two years and that space may be converted to offices for faculty and administration or additional classrooms.

There have been a variety of new appointments to the faculty and staff, the most recent of which is the first Dean of Students, Anna Maria Cobo de Paci. She will be charged with creating student life programs that reflect the new curriculum of sustainability.

There will be a total of 21 faculty members of various ranks this upcoming fall. There are fourteen administrators on campus as of now and both of those numbers will grow incrementally along with the number of students. It is expected that there will be about 400 students in attendance next year and that within a few years, the student body will reach about 2,000 and then level off. Faculty and staff appointments will be made based on the needs of the student body. The unusual curriculum created for Stony Brook Southampton will call for a wide range of faculty and lecturers that may be far from the usual spectrum of educators found on most college campuses.

The ecological orientation of the students who have chosen to attend the new school can be seen in some of the simplest things around the campus, such as the electric-powered scooters that the grounds crew is using, the non-chemical fer-ing a piece of electric art. The Ralph Lauren Kids store has upped the ante on kid's clothing stores by placing a giant white treehouse in the middle of the store. Animal-print enthusiast Devi Kroell has opened shop this season on the northeast corner of Main Street and Newtown Lane. Italian cashmere and men's luxury clothes designer Brunello Cucinelli, whose dramatic website lists "philosophy" before "collection," has also opened an East Hampton store this summer, one of the few in the world. Almost every important designer is now selling their high-end clothes at even higher prices in flashy stores in East Hampton, each trying to outdo the others.

Shopping on Rodeo Drive, I once bought a stick of Versace deodorant at the breathtaking L.A. store. I bought it because, at sixteen, I thought the block was so beautiful that I had to take some relic of it home with me and, having lived in L.A. for six weeks, I couldn't even afford cologne. Despite leaving Rodeo Drive having blown some cash on unnecessary (though quite pleasantly aromatic, I must say) deodorant and an overpriced lunch at an expensive "diner," leaving me relatively empty-handed, I still thought of the day as one of the best I spent in that city. This is because Rodeo Drive itself has long been one of Beverly Hills' main attractions. Seeing the stores (and occasionally the stars, though far less often than one is led to believe) and the shoppers (a surreal canvas of commercial perfection, similar to that of East Hampton Main Street, though, perhaps on a more grandiose scale and with palm trees) has become a cultural activity unto itself, rather than the actual buying of the high-end commodities. Every day, thousands of tourists flock to Rodeo Drive and Manhattan's Fifth Avenue, often with wide-eyed children in tow, to day-trip along the Avenue's legend as (allegedly) the crème de la crème of aristocratic shopping, as well as famous for the manmade beauty, such as Sak's snowflake winter light show. In reality, L.A. residents generally avoid the touristy Rodeo Drive, which is ostentatiously overpriced and impractical. And New York City residents often avoid Fifth Avenue, where designer boutiques refuse to have sales while designer department stores down the block offer discounts on the same duds. Regardless of the impracticality of these avenues, the designer stores themselves are so ornately designed and meticulously crafted that they are worth seeing just for themselves. And so, East Hampton's Main Street has joined a similar rank.

Of course, very few people who actually live in the Hamptons, even only over the summer, do the majority of their shopping on East Hampton's Main Street. But entertaining Hampton newcomers for a weekend, one has to take them to Main Street in East Hampton for a day — not doing so might be like robbing them of the full Hamptons experience, in spite of the fact that the day is an experience you would probably not want to have again (in lieu of a trip to the beach or a bike ride) if you weren't with guests.

Main Street, like the fashion hotspots of many major cities and fashionable towns, is beautiful in the way that a Hamptons virgin would have imagined it to be. In fact, its almost become the embodiment of what outsiders expect when they hear the term the "Hamptons," (often in the media, like on VH1's new show, "The Fabulous Life Of: The Hamptons"). The idea of the Hamptons has become marketable in and of itself.

With the amount of money that goes into crafting the boutiques, versus the amount of money actually spent by consumers on the clothing, the general belief is that these stores often don't break even. However, the locale of your brand has become essential to building it. Notice that on storefront and shopping bags, designers often place the names of the places that their store exists. Underneath "Example High End Designer," you will almost always see something like, "New York. Los Angeles. Paris." and often places like "Aspen. Bal Harbour. Bali." Rarely will you see "Buffalo" under a brand name, even if a department store in that area carries it. Now, adding "East Hampton" to the top-drawer list has become crucial to keeping up with the other prominent brands. Similarly, the store itself has to impress. In order to sell a brand name, the brand has to prove itself worthy of its prices and pretension by looking the part. So although the individual stores on Main Street, in reality, rarely garner the company a ton of money, they serve as the most important form of advertising and prove the brand's merit in the fashion game, all of which translates into a fun day for the family or guests, who try on

Getting Your Dinner Chicken at Iacono Farms on Long Lane

By T.J. Clemente

I was waiting on line at the snack bar at Main Beach in East Hampton and happened to eavesdrop on a talk between two women about the Iacono Chicken dinner they were going to have that evening.

For those who don't know about the legendary chicken farm the Iacono family has maintained on Long Lane in East Hampton since 1948, here are some basic facts. At the poultry farm, there are about 1,000-1,100 laying hens. There are Rhode Island Red hens for great brown eggs and White Leghorns for white eggs. The color of the hens' feathers determine the eggs' color. However, there is no nutritional difference between the brown and white egg. The eggs come in different sizes. These sizes include pullet, small, medium and large. Although the Iacono poultry products are not certified organic (one woman said that's because they preceded all that by forty years), the family says that they do not use any chemicals, hormones or antibiotics.

Diane Shippman, who was manager at what once was the Farmhouse Restaurant in Pantigo, explains that, "Iacono chickens are really delicious. It is so much fresher than the ones at Waldbaums and the IGA. You really can taste the difference. And the eggs are so fresh, when you buy them they were laid that morning. It's just so amazing that you have the option to go right to the farm stand right on Long Lane and buy them." In fact, local restaurants in the area such as The Laundry, mention in the menu that they serve an authentic East Hampton Iacono chicken. The Cornish Hens are also special and around Thanksgiving and other holidays, the Iaconos carry geese and turkeys.

Another East Hampton mother said that paying a little more for an Iacono chicken is always justified by the reaction it gets once it is on the dinner table. It is not the fact that

JILL & CLIFF VINER PAY FOR AN ENTIRE FUNDRAISER

By Janine Cheviot

For the second year in a row, Quogue residents Jill and Cliff Viner have generously underwritten An Evening Under the Stars — an event that will include a performance by superstar Diana Ross — to benefit The Diabetes Research Institute, a cause close to Ms. Viner's heart. Her brother, Craig Silver, was diagnosed with type 1 diabetes when he was ten years old, and her family has been involved in hoping to find a cure for the disease ever since.

While attending the University of Miami, Ms. Viner actively supported diabetes research and remembers attending the Love and Hope Ball with her parents, but said she has really reconnected with the cause over the last few years. "I wanted to increase awareness and help the New York chapter grow," she said, explaining that the chapter was developed only three years ago. "The DRI foundation is based in Miami, but they need strong support here."

Last year, the Viners hosted An Evening Under the Stars at their oceanfront Quogue residence, which featured a performance by Grammy Award-winning soul singer Patti LaBelle — who has lived with diabetes for over a decade. But this year, due to an increased outpour of interest and support, the event will be held on Saturday, August 25 at Stony Brook Southampton, accommodating 500 guests — double the capacity of last summer's affair.

"We came up with the idea last year as a way to raise awareness, but this year it's being held as a fundraiser," Ms. Viner said of the overwhelming response, adding that the stellar and compelling atmosphere will again be designed by Barton G., an international leader in the events production industry and supporter of the DRI.

But Gload had trouble hitting breaking balls from right-handed pitchers. This glaring weakness was preventing a promotion to the Major Leagues. Even so, Gload was called up to the highest level of Class A ball, playing at Brevard County, a Minor League affiliate of the Florida Marlins, in 1999. However, Gload still had trouble hitting curveballs and sliders. Scouts said that he jumped out in front of the ball, not driving the pitch the other way. He could not keep his hands back at the plate. Therefore, he pulled too many pitches to right field.

2000 was the most consequential season of Gload's Minor League career. On the day of the July 31 trade deadline, Gload was traded to the Chicago Cubs. After a month in the Cubs' Minor League system, he was promoted to the Major Leagues as a September call-up. In his Major League debut against the San Francisco Giants, Gload did not manage to get a hit, going 0-4 on the day. Five days after his call-up, Gload hit his first Major League homerun off Brian Rose in Colorado. His career had finally jump-started.

Ross Gload

Late in 2000, Gload was sent back down to the Minor Leagues and compiled good numbers at Class AAA. In 2001, Gload persevered through the Minor Leagues and was called up to the Major Leagues again, this time with the Colorado Rockies. He hit .258 in only 31

it is so local or novel, but that it taste so good, so different. "It just puts the entire meal over the top," is how she explained it. Lynn Ronchetto of Manhattan and East Hampton believes in paying more for the Iacono chicken. As she explained, "When you start with a higher quality chicken, it's more fun to add herbs and spices to bring out the great taste of the chicken."

Ms. Shiffman is all smiles when talking about going to the farm stand and buying the poultry products, calling this one of the bonuses of living in East Hampton. She enjoyed going there with her mom when she was younger and now goes on her own. She believes it's like getting strawberries from the strawberry patch, or fresh vegetables from the many local farm stands. Another woman said it is the essence of small town America to utilize the fresh, local farm products to enhance the rural experience that you just can't get shopping Up Island or in The City.

There are some who make the analogy that Iacono chicken is to East Hampton what Tate's Chocolate Chip Cookies are to Southampton. Kathleen King, the originator of Tate's Cookies, was the eleven-year-old daughter of a Southampton farmer when she started selling her cookies at her family's farm stand to make some extra spending money. In the case of the Iacono family, it is Anthony Iacono who now carries on his parents' tradition with pride and steadfastness.

If you have not yet visited the oldest poultry farm on the East End, there is still time to sample their chicken before the summer ends. The Iacono farm stand is located on Long Lane just past the East Hampton High School and is opened Mon.-Sat. from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., on Sunday from 10 a.m. to noon. The farm stand is closed on Tuesdays. Just look for the hanging wooden chicken.

John Varvatos
Fashion Designer

By Jessica Murray

John Varvatos began designing his men's lifestyle collection in 2000 — not too long ago, in fashion years. Since then, he has created a new trend in men's fashion that combines classic styling with a laid-back that is unmatched by other leading designers' work.

Varvatos grew up in Michigan and got his first exposure to fashion in college, while working in men's clothing stores. He received a degree in teaching and education, but upon graduation, Varvatos gave in to his addiction to design and put aside a career in education to pursue his fashion interests.

After owning a store in Michigan for three years, Varvatos got the chance to work at Ralph Lauren's Midwest offices and later headed to New York. In these first years at Ralph Lauren, the young designer interacted and was involved with much of the company's design team. This is when he realized, "Wow, this is what I want to do," he remembered.

Upon this epiphany, Varvatos took an array of night classes at the Fashion Institute of Technology in New York City and later, got more involved with the design side of Ralph Lauren.

After seven years with the company, he had the opportunity to be the head of menswear at Calvin Klein and went for it. He started the cK collection and had the chance to revamp a variety of things, including the company's underwear line.

"I was starting a lot of things from scratch," Varvatos said.

He returned to Ralph Lauren in 1995 as the head of men's design. It was during this time that Varvatos created and launched Ralph Lauren's youthful Polo Jeans Company, which became a great success. After a few more years at Ralph Lauren, Varvatos decided it was time to do something new — so he went solo.

"It was an opportunity to do something different in the marketplace," Varvatos said.

Varvatos saw a void in the fashion world between the preppy and Euro-chic styles, so he created a style based on his own unique vision. From skintight pinstripe suits and tailored wool vests to leather motorcycle jackets and skinny European-inspired ties, the Varvatos style is both edgy and haute. This unique style has resulted in his being named Steve Perry's official designer during Aerosmith's most recent tour. In keeping with his rock n' roll sensibility, his advertising campaigns, shot in gritty black-and-white by music documentarian Danny Clinch, star Iggy Pop, Slash, Alice Cooper, Chris Cornell and other artists with a taste for high fashion with an edge. The first John Varvatos men's line came out in the fall of 2000 and as a result of its success, the Council of Fashion Designers in America (CFDA) honored Varvatos with the Perry Ellis Award for New Talent. Fall of 2000 was a busy time for Varvatos as it was then that he debuted both his first men's line and his first store in SoHo. Since its start in 2000, the company has opened stores in six locations — the newest on Newtown Lane in East Hampton — and has sold pieces in other venues throughout North America, Europe, Asia and the Middle East.

From skintight pinstripe suits and tailored wool vests to leather motorcycle jackets and skinny European-inspired ties, the Varvatos style is both edgy and haute.

Varvatos designs several collections, including the John Varvatos Collection, the Star USA Collection — for the younger customer — and Converse by John Varvatos. He has also started producing fragrance, skincare and eyewear collections that have only added to the company's success.

Along with the Perry Ellis award, Varvatos received accolades in 2001 and 2005 as the CFDA's menswear designer of the year, putting him on the same stage as Michael Kors, Marc Jacobs, Ralph Lauren, Tommy Hilfiger and Helmut Lang. He attributes this recognition to the fact that he has been able to become more focused and aggressive with his designs with each collection. "Like anything in life, you really get your rhythm," he said.

When asked about his biggest learning experience in his business thus far, Varvatos responded that working at Ralph Lauren was "the most defining place [he] had worked for" and that Lauren taught him to "never compromise my vision." Although his newest store on Newtown Lane is just a stroll away from his old employer, mentor and friend, he does not feel competitive with Lauren, as the two designers maintain a mutual respect for one another's careers and design for a slightly different clientele. Varvatos also mentioned that working for Calvin Klein gave him the chance to experience the more modern side of fashion, while Ralph Lauren was taught him how to create a classic look.

On top of establishing himself as designer, Varvatos also values philanthropy and gets involved with the communities in which his stores reside. His store in West Hollywood has donated $1 million to the Santa Monica Rape Treatment Center and a portion of the proceeds of the sale of the Jim Marshall photographs chronicling the lives of artists such as Jimi Hendrix, Keith Richards and Johnny Cash that are on display at the new East Hampton store until September 3 will be donated to the Ross School. Varvatos values education — whether academic, musical or artistic — which is why he chose the Ross School as the beneficiary of the event.

Although Varvatos' name might be new to

In addition, there will be field study programs, research programs and internships that will be part of the programs providing real world experience for the students. There are also study abroad opportunities, including one in Jamaica's Discovery Bay Marine Laboratory, the West Indies for students interested in Tropical Marine Ecology.

the Hampton shopper, he has been a visitor to the East End for the past fifteen years. He frequently visits his in-laws in Southampton and always enjoys what the Hamptons have to offer. Varvatos maintains that, "even with some of the area's development, something about the Hamptons still seems untouched" to him. When he comes out here, he likes to spend time with his family, catch up with friends and relax on the beach. Besides his favorite hangout, the Clam Bar, the designer enjoys hanging out at his new store and watching people take in the whole experience. "I'm so busy during the week that it's nice to not always be in the midst of all the craziness," he said.

John Varvatos has earned this respite. Although he cannot be at his new store every day, he was involved with every facet of the design of the East Hampton location. He wanted the outside to look as if the store had been there for a long time, while fitting in with the local East Hampton shops. For these reasons, Varvatos decided to keep the original front façade of the store, so it felt like his store belonged to the community. The walls are lined with photographs of classic rock n' rollers, vintage furniture and lighting, which he began collecting nine months prior to the store's opening. Varvatos' passions are deeply embedded in all things vintage and rock n' roll and his new store reflects that. "This store became a lot more about my personal sensibility," he explained.

In the upcoming year, Varvatos plans to open four more stores. "It's a very exciting time for my team," he said. As the company continues to grow and he sees more people wearing his clothes, Varvatos likens the uplifting feeling he gets to the moment at the Academy Awards when Oscar-winner Sally Field got on the microphone and said, "You like me! You really like me!"

TWENTYSOMETHING.... By David Lion Rattiner

Tour De Citiots

Driving around in the Hamptons has become a lot more dangerous then it used to be — it's not because there is a lot of traffic, or because city people can't drive, or because there are illegal immigrants driving without licenses. No, we've had all that for years, but this year, we have gangs.

I'm talking about bicycle gangs. I'm talking about the overweight, spandex-wearing, helmet sporting, $2,000-bicycle-riding groups of guys who race down the streets of the Hamptons as if they were competing in the Tour De France.

The bike clans have hit the Hamptons in a big way this year. Every summer it is something different. One year, all you saw was idiots driving around with five hundred kayaks strapped to the top of their roofs. Another year, it was ridiculously-sized longboards and another year, it was guys on bicycles that were so low to the ground that they looked like they were sitting on chairs.

This year is the year of the Tour De Citiot. A year of grown men and women dressing up like Lance Armstrong, sitting on a bicycle seat the size of a carrot and parading through the streets wearing shirts that have DHL sponsor logos on them.

I'm all for a fitness craze. Lord knows, we all need to get outside more and enjoy the weather. I have no problems with joggers, or the women that jog with their babies in jogging strollers, or skateboarders, kayakers, or even idiot long boarders. But the other day, while driving to work, the Tour De Citiots got to me.

I want to make it clear that if you are a bike rider, you are totally fine in my book — because you are a cool person — but these other morons just look ridiculous. I was driving behind a pack of three guys, all dressed the same and all sporting beer bellies, sweating through their one-size-too-small spandex t-shirts, riding their bicycles directly in front of me, in the middle of the road on Route 27 in Wainscott. They were hunched down in an athletic position, wearing sunglasses and gloves that exposed their fingers, going about ten miles an hour. Oooooooh, how impressive.

I slowed down and was fine. I've dealt with this before. "Live and let live" is what I say. Yay for the planet and nay for global warming. All I needed to do was zip around them and drive away. However, as I attempted to do this, one of them did the most audacious thing I have seen in a while. He stuck out his hand — without looking, mind you — in a very authoritative way, ordering me not to pass him on the left.

Who does this guy think he is?

Apparently, the guy didn't think it was a good idea for me to pass him because we were traveling on a double-yellow-lined road and since they were going so lightning fast, it might be dangerous. You have got to be kidding me.

I ignored his hand and maneuvered my car on the left-hand side of the road and drove next to him for a moment, made eye contact and shook my head as if I was disappointed in the human race. Then I got in front of him. I truly hoped that my look made this guy feel like a jerk. You know, if we were in the wild with no laws, I could have just run that guy's ass right over. And his little friends', too. But I chose not to.

Instead, I drove directly in front of them and slowed my car down to match their speed, but then dropped it down to eight miles an hour. I could see their heads start picking up like little chickens. "What's he doing? Is he messing with us? Huh? What's happening? I'm so confused!"

Yes, you idiot, I am messing with you because you are a ridiculous moron who just told me I couldn't pass you on the left because you are on an expensive bicycle.

When I started to sense that the Tour De Citiots wanted to pass ME on the left, so with authority, I stuck my hand out the window and indicated how I felt about them.

I had a great day at work after that.

JEANETTE BRODY RATTINER, 94

By Dan Rattiner

Jeanette Brody Rattiner is best remembered in this community as the co-owner, along with her late husband Al, of White's Drug and Department Store in Montauk during the 1950s, 1960s and 1970s. She was active in the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, and was among the original families who formed that organization. And she was an active golfer, playing whenever the opportunity came up. Upon the sale of the store, she and Alan became snowbirds and began a long retirement, spending summers in Montauk and playing golf at Montauk and at Noyac, where they had been charter members from the 1950s, and in Florida at Palm Aire in Pompano Beach, where she and Al lived in a condominium on the eighth hole of one of the five golf courses that were built for that community.

If these were the things that Mrs. Rattiner was known for here on the East End, she was known nationally for something very much else. Growing up in Brooklyn as an opinionated and precocious girl with an intellectual bent, she went off to college at the age of sixteen, just two months before black Monday brought the country to a halt in the Wall Street crash of 1929. With her immigrant parents unable to afford to continue with her schooling, she obtained a scholastic scholarship and was accepted at Brooklyn Law School, where she graduated in June of 1935 as one of just thirteen women and with the highest grades in the history of the school. Her accomplishment was noted in the New York Times, as were some parts of her Valedictory speech. Nevertheless, because she was a woman, and because there had never been a female valedictorian before, she was denied what was normally given to the Valedictorian of the School, which was a clerkship with a State Supreme Court Justice. Some of her professors scrambled around, and ultimately she was offered a job, a rare job during the Depression, as a lawyer working to revise the charter for the City of New York under Mayor LaGuardia. To the end of her days, although not generally known in the struggle of the women's movement, she was often sought out by younger women lawyers as a source of inspiration in that cause, who viewed her with a sense of awe.

After two years working on the charter, Mrs. Rattiner had a blind date with a man who had been voted the handsomest man in the graduating class of the Brooklyn College of Pharmacy. Coming downstairs to the living room of her parent's home to meet him, she tripped on the steps and tumbled down the stairs and into his arms. She often told this story. Soon after, she married him. When asked why by her son, who is here writing of her passing, she once replied, "because he was a hunk."

The Rattiners soon settled in Millburn, New Jersey, living there for the next eighteen years, raising their son Daniel, and their daughter Nancy, who was raised there until the age of 10 and then moved in 1956, with her parents, to finish her upbringing, in the motel and fishing town of Montauk, N.Y.

Mrs. Rattiner was often described as a life force. Although friendly enough with strangers, she held her guard up until she was sure of them. She had lived through a triple threat — the Depression, the Second World War and the Holocaust where many of her friends had perished. But once inside her circle, she was both generous and loyal. She was funny, curious, liberal, a founder of book clubs, and it was not unusual for her, with her husband, when living in Montauk, to get in the car, drive to New York City to have dinner and see a Broadway show, and then drive back later that night. She also continued dozens of friendships with some of the couples that she raised her children with and who made the rest of their lives in New Jersey, often visiting them or entertaining them in her home in Montauk on long weekends. She was also fiercely supportive of almost everything that her children, and later her grandchildren, did. And if she was not supportive, she would tell them so. She marked the birthdays of every one among her friends and in her family with presents, cards, parties, and if they were less than 18, money. And when her husband, in his

Donald Trump has everything, from his own steaks to his own bottled water and last Saturday, "The Donald" even managed to put his trademark name on a beautiful day in the Hamptons. The Bridgehampton Polo Club, along with Trump on the Ocean and Trump himself, hosted week 5 of the Mercedes-Benz Polo Challenge at JetOne Jets Field. Hundreds of VIPs attended, including Aaron Reid, Anne V, Barbara K, David Zinczenko, Rick and Kathy Hilton, Naomi Judd, Paul Sevigny, Rachel Smith (Miss USA), Riyo Mori (Miss Universe), Rocco DiSpirito, Star Jones Reynolds and Tara Conner (former Miss USA).

Trump was in his glory with his wife, model Melania Knauss Trump, by his side, while he promoted his latest project on Long Island, a five-star restaurant, catering and wedding facility at Jones Beach with business partner, Steven M. Carl. Trump on the Ocean has the potential to hold up to three thousand people. "TOTO" is scheduled to open in Spring, 2009 and Trump couldn't sound more enthusiastic. "It's going to be something really spectacular. We are really happy with it. It will be the finest catering hall anywhere in the world. We are already booking it like crazy!" Even with a new project underway and a fleet of his own helicopters, Trump admits that he has no intentions of calling LI home anytime soon, "There's just too much traffic. You have to drive at the right time of day or it could be traumatic. But," The Donald hinted, "You never know, it could happen."

Trump and Melania's son, Barron William, is turning two in March and Donald admits that he enjoys being a daddy late in life. "I like it! It's terrific." Maybe it's because he has nothing to do with diaper duty. "I leave that up to Melania," he admitted. Baron is Melania's first child and she doesn't seem to mind. "He plays with him in the morning and in the evening. It's amazing. There's nothing like it!"

Trump's hit show, "The Apprentice," was renewed for another two years, but this season will have a celebrity twist. Trump says that he has been in talks with several celebs, including Britney Spears, but revealed, "The celebrity 'Apprentice' will be officially announced over the next week or so. Most people came after us. Everyone wants to be on this show. 200 people have asked and we will pick about 12 or 14. Rather than working for me, they will go out and win a tremendous amount of money for charity."

Post polo, the beautiful people gathered at The Estate in Sag Harbor for a cocktail party hosted by Perrier-Jouët, along with actress and Sports Illustrated model, Molly Sims; John McDonald and Houston artist Dan Dunn. Guests, including Katherine Drew, Richard Kubick, Ian Shapolsky, Jerry Della Femina, Judy Licht and Seth Greenberg, got down and dirty while they painted on hundreds of 2' x 2' blank canvasses that were on display. ERNST BENZ TIMEPIECE – $3,600

Time flies, as does this unique timepiece from the Ernst Benz Collection. The Great Circle, ChronoScope 47mm Automatic Valjoux 7750 movement, sports an ivory dial and brown alligator strap. Swiss Engineer and inventor Ernst Benz became well known for developing instrumentation and manufacturing timepiece and industrial jewelry. Aviator and gliding enthusiast, he was distinctly aware of the need for accurate and instantly legible instruments while airborne. The aesthetics of these watches were as highly regarded as their exceptional technical quality and superior precision. Manufactured in limited quantities, Benz's automatic watches soon became a favorite timepiece among pilots, yachtsman and racecar drivers in Europe and North America.

whether or not it is any comfort to anybody, these two changes will also be taking place in the rest of America at about the same pace as they will here. So the West Coast gets the quadruple whammy — more heat waves, warmer nights, more frequent rainstorms and more intense rainstorms. While we get only two of these problems.

The averaging out of the studies suggests that by 2099 the climate of New York City will be somewhat similar to what we have today in Savannah, Georgia. There will be more balmy shirt sleeve days, little or no snow, lots of flowers and foliage and some stands of palm trees in and around New York. Also a greater abundance of seals, wild parrots and even a flamingo or two.

"This notion of the greening of the planet... generally is a positive benefit," said Dr. John Christy of the University of Alabama at Huntsville. "The earth will bloom."

But there are downsides. Fewer cold days means less skiing and sleigh riding and more days between the first and last frost, which will mean more bugs. But it will also mean more birds and wildlife, a longer growing season and a general sense of well being for everyone here on the East Coast what with the greater abundance of nature and all good things to eat as you might find in a semi-tropical area.

So it looks like a happy time for everybody here on the East End for the next ninety years or so. It's probably a good idea to brace ourselves for the influx of people fleeing the greater weather extremes in Italy, Spain, Egypt, Libya, Australia, Brazil and the South Seas. But what the hell. We can handle it. That's why we have the big lady with the torch in New York Harbor. We just have to change the inscription.

"Give us your damp, your moldy, your bug bitten, your rain soaked, surfing injured, your rained on, your bird pooped on, your poor....."

Just keep those air conditioners going. Stay away from the shoreline. Make sure your truck is tanked up with gas. And have yourself a beer. The Global Warming Refugees are coming and they'll have spending money. These will be the good times. •

BREAKING NEWS

By Michael Vilensky

The harassment charge against Nick Epley, the 18-year-old son of Southampton Village Mayor Mark Epley, has been dropped. Southampton Village Justice Barbara Wilson dismissed the charge in a Southampton court on Monday, August 13.

The charge, harassment in the second degree, was brought against Epley in June by Brian Russell of the Anti-Illegal Immigration Association. Epley and Russell reportedly got into an altercation outside the mayor's home where Russell was protesting. The altercation was caught on tape and it shows Epley standing at his front door waiting to be let into his house while more than twenty protestors shout profanities at him, as he tells Mr. Russell to get the camera out of his face and pushes it away.

After the charges were filed, Mayor Epley said he was surprised because he and Mr. Russell had had a meeting at which Russell agreed not to press charges. The Mayor says he believes Mr. Russell may have been pressured to press charges by other anti-illegal immigrant protestors. The young Epley pleaded not guilty to the charges. According to the teenager's attorney, Edward Burke, the district attorney's office ultimately declined to prosecute the case after seeing the videotape.

The incident incited the mayor to create a new local law that prohibits targeting one specific residential home in a protest.

Meanwhile, the eighteen-year-old Epley is looking forward to putting the incident behind him as he heads off to college.

GEORGE DOES WHAT?

Rumor has it that I've been doing it all over the east end for years.

Well, it's true and I'm proud of it.

I never kept it a secret.

Kazdin Pools always did much more than just build award winning pools and spas.

I really get upset, when I hear, "George, I knew you built Mrs. So and so's gunite pool. I didn't know you also did vinyl."

We do. We always did.

We build any shape gunite or vinyl pools and any spa you can think of.

We maintain them and when they start to wear, we renovate them.

Customers are always coming to our retail location, chatting, buying chemicals and pool toys. Having their pool water tested free.

I guess some people just won't understand that we can also put the entire package together.

At very competitive prices.

Pools. Spas. Lighting. Patios and Decks. Landscaping. Repairs and Maintenance. We do it all and we're going to keep doing it.

Now you know, and I feel better."

at bats in Colorado. Spending another full season in the Minor Leagues in 2003, the White Sox saw talent in Gload as they gave him his first full Major League season. Gload did not disappoint, finishing eighth in AL Rookie of the Year Voting and leading all rookies in average (.321), slugging percentage (.479) and on-base percentage (.375) in 234 at bats. However, most of his hits were off fastballs.

Now, for the first time in his Major League career, Gload has been given the chance to start for the Kansas City Royals. He has surpassed expectations as he has produced well out of the 5-spot in the order. Royals' manager Buddy Bell does not plan on taking him out of the lineup any time soon as he has been slugging .571 since the All-Star break.

Now Gload, making adjustments, is hitting .294 off curveballs and .341 off sliders from right-handed pitching. Not only are breaking balls not a weakness for him anymore, they have become his strength at the plate. 32% of his hits are hit to left field, which means he is waiting back on the ball properly now, and driving off-speed pitches to the outfield. Ross Gload's career path has taken many dips and turns. However, his perseverance and determination have allowed him to be the best baseball player that the Hamptons have produced since Carl Yazstremski. It is possible that Gload could be a star in the league for many years to come.

"We were looking at Jupiter until ten minutes ago."

Besides the people standing in line, there were a whole bunch of people sitting on benches at picnic tables in this clearing. And they were looking up. It was an absolutely amazing sky, a great dome of stars and planets and galaxies and well, a few blinking items that apparently were airplanes. The red neon, some sort of chemical inside a plastic tubing, snaked its way around the site.

Every once in a while, a collective gasp went up from the crowd sitting at the picnic tables.

"What?"

"Did you see it?"

"What?"

"A flash from a shooting star. Over there."

"I just saw one. It was the other way. Just over the tree in the back."

Everyone was looking at something that had nothing to do with the telescope, but did have to do with astronomy and was the reason we had decided to take the drive out there. This was the big night of the annual meteor shower that comes to the United States every August.

"There's another one."

"That's an airplane."

"It's trying to get away."

The shooting stars, or meteor shower flashes, were, according to another astronomer who was over at the picnic tables, grains of sand burning up in the atmosphere about a hundred miles up. There was this long, long trail of meteor dust, part of the orbit of an asteroid that was forever circling the sun in exactly the same orbit each time. And each time, as the Earth passed through the orbit of this asteroid, bits of its dust got caught up in our atmosphere to make this sparkly nighttime trail. It would be at its peak at about two in the morning, far too late for just about anybody there.

"There's another one."

A few people lay down on top of these picnic tables. There were eight tables. You could get sixteen people on them lying down head to head or feet to feet. We found a vacant one and did just that. It was quite relaxing.

Every once in a while, however, the high-beams of a car on the driveway would shine up the hill as someone drove by. People would shield their eyes.

"Jeeez," somebody said. "They're trying to blind us."

"I see the rings of Jupiter," somebody at the telescope said.

"There are no rings around Jupiter. You're thinking of Saturn."

"Whatever."

At one point, my girlfriend and I returned to the back of the line by the telescope to look at Jupiter, which by popular demand, had been returned to the eyepiece by the astronomer using his remote control.

"Can you see the moons of Jupiter?" the astronomer asked me.

"I see what looks like three tiny stars, two on one side and one on the other."

"That's them."

"But Jupiter is kind of blurry."

"The telescope has to get the humidity off its lenses. It does it automatically."

"How long does that take?"

"Fifteen minutes."

"Okay, next," the astronomer said. So I left and my girlfriend looked for a while.

"When the lens clears, you'll see these horizontal stripes on Jupiter," the astronomer was telling my girlfriend.

We left a short time later. But when we got down to the car, my ipod, which had been in my pants pocket, was not there anymore. I was sure it had come out when I was lying on the picnic table. So I went back — bravely using only one cell phone — but couldn't find it. Then, I did find it, in the bottom of one of the pockets of my pants I had looked in before unsuccessfully.

"It will be nice when they have an observatory," I said. It appeared that they had trundled the thing out along the tubes of red glowing lights from the outbuilding. When they were done, they were going to trundle it back. It probably weighed about a thousand pounds.

"I think they're onto something," my girlfriend said.

I had backed out of my parking space with the headlights off so as not to shine the lights on the telescope up the hill. Now I turned them back on.

We drove down the driveway the way we had come and went back through town, stopping at John's Drive in to get ice cream cones. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

Sheltered Islander #461

Time, time, time, is on my side, yes it is

I have a memory from when I was a very small child of my great grandfather, Clancy Seaman, standing in the kitchen in his LIRR conductor's uniform, with a vest that had a chain draped from a buttonhole to a small pocket on the vest. My great grandfather used a pocket watch, as was the custom for his generation. I always thought he looked so proud and dapper in his railroad uniform. I think I fell in love with pocket watches because of that memory.

Pocket watches are novelties now and except for the real antiques, no modern watchmakers make them and no one uses them. A pity. The wristwatch came into existence in the 1920s — courtesy of Tiffany's, who made them for the Army and called them "tank watches" — and we've had time on our hands ever since.

If you ever need to know if someone is right or left-handed and you don't want to ask him, look at his wrist. Right-handers wear their watches on their left wrist and vice-versa. And if someone forgot to wear their watch on any given day, you would know that by the fact that they look at a blank wrist and curse every five minutes all day long.

I noticed that many young people don't wear watches at all. I asked my daughter why not, and she said, "Cell phones, Mom. You can set your screen to always show the time. Wearing a watch is for old people, it's the sign of a TC, Technologically Challenged, that's you Mom."

"Yeah, but when you want to know the time, you have to find your phone in your purse first."

"No, that's what phone chains are for," she said as she showed me her cell phone on a tiny tether, strapped to her purse.

"What's the little seahorse for?" I asked, observing that they were also attached to the phone.

"Phone charms."

"Phone charms?"

"Jewelry for your phone — should be a natural concept for you, oh Mother whose breathalyzer test would show a blood glitter level of 2%."

Using your phone as a timekeeper, jewelry for the phone, a leash for the phone, apparently an entire subculture centered on cell phones and their new role as timekeeping devices has been blossoming without my knowledge or consent.

"Maybe I should get one of these iPhones I saw on TV," I said.

"You don't even have a cell phone, Mom. You aren't ready or qualified to own an iPhone. You know they play music, right?"

"In your ear, while you're talking? That's terrible!"

"No, it combines a cell phone with an iPod, you know, the thing you call my 'pea pod'."

"Does it have a clock in it too?"

"Yes, Mom. Not only does it tell time, you can set an alarm and there's a mini program that sends a signal to your coffeepot to start brewing and turns your TV on to a preprogrammed station."

"Well, that's convenient."

"No, Mom. I'm joking."

"Oh, it doesn't tell time and play music?"

"Just forget it, Mom."

Not long after that conversation, my daughter started a job and all of a sudden, started wearing a wristwatch.

"What happened to wrist watches being old fashioned?" I asked.

"Mom, be practical. I can't look at my phone all day."

"So, does this mean I'm smart after all?"

"Don't get ahead of yourself, Mother."

"Admit it, I am smart sometimes!"

"Keep it up and I'll start talking about CD burners and wireless remotes and Bluetooth! Then we'll see how smart you are!"

"Oh yeah? I've got a hundred embarrassing pictures of you from your childhood! They're going up on my YouLube.com today! What's so funny?"

— was moved by horse and wagon to what would always be dry land up on the hillside. That place was named New Katonah. And after the old Katonah went underwater, they dropped the "New" in New Katonah.

The name "Katonah" is the name of the Indian Chief who originally sold the stretch of land that was to become Katonah — both old and new — to the white settlers. It's a nice name. And it sure seems like Martha likes it.

Katonah furniture — made in China, of course — has a nice ring to it. It sounds Midwestern, strong, Indian, dependable, traditional, like the name of a log cabin amidst tall trees somewhere up in the mountains.

I do not know what Katonah means in the Algonquin language. And trying to look it up on the Internet gets you nowhere. But the Indians were famous for naming people for their attributes. Running Deer. Thunderbird. Silly Fox. Maybe Katonah means "chief who sold our land for a song." I have no idea.

In any case, if it weren't Martha Stewart doing this, I suspect the residents of Katonah wouldn't be worrying too much about it. Pepperidge Farm has a cookie named Montauk. It's a pretty good cookie. And Montauk hasn't suffered any because of it, though they haven't benefited either. Local Montauk merchants pay the same wholesale price for bags of Pepperidge Farm Montauks as merchants in, say, Akron, Ohio do. There are no free cookies for Montauk, not even once in a while.

So what about Martha and East Hampton? Well, when the town was originally founded in 1648, the locals named it Maidstone because it reminded some of the settlers of a town in England by that name. Then, in 1682, the name of the place was changed to East Hampton.

My personal opinion is that East Hampton is safe from Martha Stewart. East Hampton kind of ties in pretty good with Bridgehampton, Hampton Bays, Southampton and Westhampton. So if you wanted East Hampton, you'd have to take the lot. And us Hamptoners would put up a stiff fight. Worst case, the locals might have to settle for losing Quogue or someplace else pretty small just to shake the lawsuit.

Still, nobody has gone to the trouble of patenting the name Hamptons. And maybe the problem is, what happens if Martha gets tired of Katonah? Sheets and pillow sales are falling. The furniture line has declared bankruptcy. Only the paint line is holding steady. So, Martha pulls the plug.

And the sign people come in and tell the Katonians that, from now on, their little village is to be named Meatball. She holds the patent on the place. She is starting an Italian foods line and her marketing people say Meatball hits the spot. What she really likes is the LOOK of the village of Katonah, er, Meatball. A picture of the stores downtown all in a little row, done up in old fashioned pen and ink, THAT'S what the marketing people tell her the few remaining customers are still in love with.

So, it'll be the same drawing of downtown. Only they'll call it Meatball. And all the store names using Katonah have to change. She's already made a deal with the Postal Service. It's done.

Really it could be a nightmare. Did you know there is a Dinkytown, Minnesota? A Lick Fork, Virginia? A Smileyberg, Kansas? A Monkey's Eyebrow, Kentucky?

Look it up. It's true. You'll see. •

The quintessential musical of the 70s is a story about love found on a summer beach, then lost amid the teenage social and peer prejudices of the tumultuous final year of high school and ultimately found again. John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John play the love interests in this musical romp that spans the familiar teenage backdrops of the 50s such as the malt shop and the drive-in.

"Everything will be perfect," Ms. Viner said confidently.

Originally from Boca Raton, Florida, the Viner family has been visiting the East End for almost five years. "Our daughters were attending Boston University and University of Pennsylvania and we thought it would be an easily accessible place to meet up," Ms. Viner said of the decision to purchase their Quogue home. When she's not hosting lavish charity events in the Hamptons, Ms. Viner enjoys sitting on her deck, staring at the ocean, water skiing on the bay and bike riding along Dune Road. "It's beautiful here," she said contentedly. "I love it."

Diana Ross

Ms. Viner, who serves on DRI's National Board of Directors, chose to concentrate her philanthropic efforts on the Diabetes Research Institute because of the foundation's recognition as a world leader in cure-focused research. "DRI pulls researchers from all over the world," she said. "And a significant amount of funds go straight to research." She also noted that some of the proceeds from An Evening Under the Stars will go to children who can't afford insulin pumps and family therapy, so they can understand how to maintain healthier lifestyles while living with the disease.

"When my brother was first diagnosed, it was almost like a freak thing," she recalled. "It was very odd to see a young boy testing himself with a needle." But since it's inception in the early 1970s, the DRI has been an innovative force, making significant contributions to the field of diabetes research and pioneering many of the techniques used in islet transplantation — a promising treatment for type 1 diabetes. This treatment transplants healthy, insulin-producing islet cells from donor pancreases, which could potentially restore the ability to produce insulin and cure the patient's disease. "DRI has made great strides, but we still need to help scientists find a cure," said Ms. Viner, adding that DRI has a four-star charity rating in the Charity Navigator, the nation's largest and most-utilized evaluator of charities.

"We're excited and pleased to have the Diabetes Research Institute Foundation as the beneficiary of such a high-profile and special event. We're thankful to Jill Viner and Cliff Viner and Barton G. Weiss of Barton G. for their effort and support in putting this great evening together," said Robert A. Pearlman, president and CEO of the DRI Foundation. "The willingness of such extraordinary people to give of themselves is further evidence that the Diabetes Research Institute Foundation is truly the organization of choice for people searching for a cure for diabetes."

Ms. Viner's personal connection, the most powerful motivator, allows her to truly speak from the heart. Her brother, Craig, 38 years after his diagnosis, is doing great. "He will be at the event," she said lovingly. "He is so touched and so appreciative."

fact that it was once a prospective site for the John Jermain Memorial Library's expansion plan (also mentioned in the lawsuit) and you can see how this white elephant has become intertwined with the present day folklore of the Village.

While there are only two sisters involved, the sale of the house actually involves three parties. The first is Helga, who has sought and received a Suffolk County Supreme Court ruling to put the house up for auction. Then there is Annselem, who does not want to sell. The third party involved is the Savant Garde Institute, a non-profit organization founded by Annselem. Annselem contests that this Institute maintains a 25% share in the property, leaving each sister with 37.5%. But if Annselem owns the Institute, then she technically owns 62.5% of the property, leaving Helga as the minority shareholder. The exact delegation of ownership percentages has yet to be ruled upon, but despite that information, Suffolk County Supreme Court Justice Thomas Whelan has sided with Helga to place the house up for auction at the minimum price of $900,000. If the house is sold, 25% will be held in escrow by the Suffolk County Treasurer until a ruling comes down to determine who will receive it.

The story does not end there. Currently, on dansbid.com, Annselem has placed a listing that reads: "Acquire a 50% position in the most controversial and central location in The Hamptons." The listing continues with several detailed descriptions of development plans, which would yield millions upon millions for the partner. The opening bid is $5,000,000 with a "buy it now" price of $20,000,000. But under the court's decision, she currently only owns 37.5%.

Last October, Steven Grossman held court as the referee for the house auction. He opened with a starting price of $1.1 million. Not a bite. It was over within minutes, then Annselem took center stage and offered anyone a 50% share in the house for $800,000 in an attempt to buy her sister out. Again, there were no takers. Then, the battle went back to the courts.

In her lawsuit, Annselem claims to have purchased the property outright from her parents' estate in 1976. She also contends that "appointed or elected officials acting under cover of law and in concert and/or conspiracy with the private interests of next-door neighbors and/or racketeering real estate developers and their corrupt attorneys" have violated her First, Fourth, Fifth and Fourteenth Amendment rights. The suit goes on to accuse the Sag Harbor Police Department of civil rights violations and racial crimes in the 1980s. The John Jermain Memorial Future Fund is allegedly tied to a conspiracy with Sag Harbor and North Haven residents in regard to vandalism — in order to drop the market value of the Morpurgo land, which would allow the property to be purchased as the site for John Jermain Library's expansion. The list goes on and on.

With a property entangled in so many legal battles, it seems that a buyer would have to be willing to subject himself/herself to a chance that they would be dragged into the courts as well. For many years to come, a buyer could potentially be walking into a spider web of litigation, costing them time and money, possibly beyond what the property is worth, even with Justice Whelan's ruling of dual ownership of the property between both sisters, and the ordered decision to sell the house.

In the next few weeks, you may hear that Artemis Smith is suing Christine Stanley over the Morpurgo house, or vice versa. Each sister goes by an alias: Helga is sometimes known as "Christine Stanley" and Annselem does much of her work under the name "Artemis Smith." A joking man might say that there are five parties involved in the ownership of the property, but this is no laughing matter.

At the heart of the matter are 72 and 73-years-old sisters, who will more than likely spend the rest of their lives battling over a house — a piece of land and an ailing structure, all the while their own lives are lived out in newspapers, the jeers of onlookers, and the discontent of each other. It is a terrible shame when a material possession comes between family bonds — when a collapsing house becomes a symbol for a collapsing relationship.

70s, became ill with Parkinsons, she personally nursed him and encouraged him for nearly fifteen years until his final passing. People observing this, inside the family and out, often commented that she kept him going, going places and doing things, in a way that seemed to defy fate. If there was anyone who could get him to live almost forever, it would be her. It was unbelievable.

Mrs. Rattiner sold the Montauk home when her husband died, and continued with her cultural life and her many friends at Pompano Beach in Florida until her passing on August 15, 2007. She continued playing golf almost to the end. On the afternoon of August 14, she had gone to a lecture, then gone on to dinner with a friend. There she suffered a massive stroke, an ambulance took her to the hospital where she was declared non-responsive. She had a living will, and as a result of its wishes, died the next day. She is survived by her two children, six grandchildren and four great grandchildren, and she is buried next to the man she loved in the Wellwood Cemetery in Farmingdale, Long Island.

The summer concert series, Sustainable Pleasures, was also a huge hit with the community and the concert series looks forward to a bright future on the campus in the soon-to-be-renovated Avram theater. Prior to renovations at the Avram theater, the last recital in the theater will be the Sustainable Pleasures series to be held on Wednesday, August 29th at 7:30 p.m. President Shirley Strum Kenny along with Martin Schoonen, Interim Dean of Stony Brook Southampton, and all the new faculty members hired for the start of the first full year of residency, will be in attendance. This will be a night of celebration for Stony Brook University — the next morning marks the start of student move-in at the Southampton campus!

clothes in interesting-looking stores around well-dressed people.

On the other hand, Main Street in East Hampton, is still really perfectly paved and filled with the prettiest people. And the clothes are often the most beautiful of their kind. In the end, Main Street isn't really even selling clothes anymore — its selling the façade of a long-coveted lifestyle, where money can be spent to an endless degree purely on fun, luxury and beauty. But while a day on the surrealy-chic block serves as alluring entertainment, make sure you don't spend too much time in the area — because, like everything else on Main Street, while that luxurious lifestyle is attractive, it's still a bit overpriced.

CHARLES BUSCH SHINES AT BAY STREET

The multi talented Charles Busch delighted the opening night audience at the Bay Street Theatre Mainstage in the sly revival of his 1989 suspense thriller The Lady In Question helmed by Broadway veteran Christopher Ashley. The handsome production is a zany homage to 1940's film noir, served with panache and wit by the sterling cast. Don't miss a legend now thur Sept 2.

THE GOOD NIGHT - TO SAY THE LEAST

The special screening held at the East Hampton Theater of "The Good Night" a film by Jake Paltrow, had a guest list that looked more like a Hollywood premiere than a Hampton's screening. Andrew Saffir of the Cinema Society and the Wall Street Journal gave the Hamptons an "A List" special mention with many Hampton's bold faced names. The movie was a romantic comedy, very enjoyable, yet more surreal because Kyle MacLachlan was sitting behind us – remember he was the star of the surrealist "Twin Peaks".

The Sailing Society

The Southold Junior Sailing Association Brings On Competitive Sailing

By T.J. Clemente

Last weekend The Southold Yacht Club had an awards dinner for its Junior sailing program. The program, under the direction of Mike Spicer and Pam Sakowich, is vibrant, boasting over 110 young sailors with ages ranging from 7 years old to 18. Commodore Peter Moore and his wife Maureen Moore proudly assisted in handing out the many awards. Maureen is in charge of the junior sailing program.

The Southold Yacht Clubs Junior Program is part of an eight-club association called the Peconic Gardiner's Junior Sailing Association. The participating yacht clubs consist of, Southold, Mattituck, Old Cove, Orient, Shinnecock, Shelter Island and Southampton. The young sailors start off in Opti's, then move up to Sunfish's, then Lasers and then to the top level race 420s. At Southold Yacht Club, the junior sailing program begins at 8:30 a.m. and ends at 5 p.m. with most junior sailors on the water for about two hours and the high level racers getting 3 hours of instruction.

In a conversation with one of the parents of the three racers, Jane Ann Leonard gave some insight on what it takes to commit children to racing. "It is a down to earth program, wholesome, with friendly competition," explained Mrs. Leonard whose husband Tom is an executive for Barclay's Bank. She believes the children ascertain, "Great skills to take with them for the rest of their lives."

To do this, Southold Yacht Club has thirteen instructors. Jane said that Mike Spicer and Pam Sakowich, "Did an exceptional job this year leading Southold Yacht Club's Junior Program on to one of its best years ever. We are either at the top or near the top of almost every event."

The season starts in late June with the first race this last year on July 7. The season closed with the August 18 award ceremony that was well attended by young sailors, parents and siblings.

The Leonard family boasts 3 female racers, with daughters Claudia Leonard, Lauren Leonard and Madison Leonard. What the Leonard's enjoy is that besides the sailing the, "Kids in all the clubs are all friendly, often attending intra-club social functions."

Mrs. Leonard added the programs keep the children "connected using sailing as a life long bond."

At the present moment The Leonard family owns two Sunfish, plus a powerboat. The parents admit, "420's are in our future somehow."

Not banking on sailing scholarships, Jane Leonard just hopes the girls will perhaps race at the college level. In a candid moment she admitted she wished she had been exposed to a program like this when she was growing up. She and her husband are so happy to have the opportunity to be so involved with the program. She stressed that almost all the parents are. This year the Southold Yacht Club had its first Junior Program fundraiser that targeted raising monies to buy a new safety boat and other equipment. The event was held on a big tent on the beach and was a huge success, with next year's event a sure thing.

With so many of the programs children living full time in Southold, and even some on the water, some children commute to the club and home by sailboat.

It is quite a sight to see youngsters aged between 7 and 8 out there competing in all different wind conditions on a course against another club racing small sailboats. The look on the young faces of both the boys and girls reading the wind and plotting the right course to optimize the current wind is priceless. The precision of the older "teens" is astonishing as they are trained to be world-class racers.

The Southold Yacht Club itself has its own club championships, with many categories based on ages and boat size. The Leonard's are looking forward to watching their daughters compete in those season ending races. When asked if she sails, Mrs. Jane Ann Leonard quickly said, "Only recreationally."

Even though this program is a recreational program there is serious sailing going on.

The Leonard's are preparing to pack up their Southold summer home and head back to New Jersey. However, when they do finally make the drive home to end this season, they'll be sailboat dreaming.

Sexy North Fork Belly Dancing Students Have Some Hip Action Going On

By Phyllis Lombardi

"Gotta dance. Gotta dance." That was Gene Kelly in "Singin' in the Rain." And boy, did he! Dance, that is. You see him once and you're hooked.

Now when I think of dancing, I think feet first. Then maybe arms and hips. Indeed, the whole body. But I don't often think belly and I can't imagine Kelly thought belly.

Though there are people, real people, here on the North Fork who do. Pick up a copy of an events calendar from Riverhead or Southold towns and you're likely to see an announcement of a belly dancing class – at a library, in a school, at a recreation center.

True, I'm rarely concerned with my belly except when last year's jeans don't button. Probably because of ice cream, and I'm willing to accept the consequences. But I thought it might be fun to attend one of those belly-dancing classes. Purely as an observer, you understand.

So on a steamy summer evening I headed east. The Town of Southold had scheduled a seven-session belly dancing class. Location: Southold Library community room. About a dozen women had signed up, paid the modest fee, and were ready to go at 6:30. Supper dishes were probably still in the sink. No matter. The night was made for dancing.

As it was made to teach me a lesson. Again. Fifteen minutes into the first two-hour session and I knew what I didn't know. That belly dancing is physically demanding (a good cardio-vascular workout), it has a long history (it's probably the oldest dance form) and it can be absolutely beautiful. Also that it has little to do with belly and lots to do with Oriental and Middle Eastern cultures. Then, when a bunch of enthusiastic North Fork women give it a go, it can be great fun.

First though, the teacher. Lenora Dome is her name and she gave us 120 minutes of her self. Dressed in a black outfit, her long blonde hair providing contrast, Lenora looked marvelous. When she welcomed the class and began a ten-minute outline of the course, I just knew she'd have full attention. Then, when she put on a CD and began a demo dance...well, that's when I regretted not signing up for the course.

Lenora maintains belly dancing reduces stress, that it is great exercise, and that everyone enjoys the individual and group dance routines. Members of the class, most dressed in shorts and T-shirts, nodded in agreement.

Nodding was about all the North Fork belly dancers could do since most of them were breathless, or almost so, as they followed Lenora's directions and suggestions. "Stretch," she'd call and the dancers did. "Use a sliding motion, like a snake. And your hands are snake heads." The workout went on. "Bend your legs." And then groans and laughter from the group as Lenora called out "Know what you're going to do? Triple-time it."

When a dancer left the group for a couple of minutes to search out some juice or water, I had my chance to say hello. That's how I met Patty Millman from Greenport. Patty had been dancing up front near teacher Lenora, following every move. In her rose tank top, black pants and white-glitter hip scarf, Patty looked terrific. It's a compliment to say her arms evoked those snakes.

Also in need of a drink was Southold's Linda Cooper. This was not Linda's first belly dancing experience. Indeed, last December she'd taken a one-session class at the library. Appropriately named "Jingle Bellies," the class was so much fun Linda was quick to sign up for this lengthier course.

Listen to Lenora again. She teaches the dancers new moves in relation to housework (we can't get away from it). "Reach as if you're vacuuming" or "bend as if opening a drawer." I like this one. "Your arms are filled with grocery bags so bump the car door closed with a hip." Ouch!

The night's highlight? Well, Lenora distributed filmy veils – each a three-yard rectangle – to the dancers. Gold veils, turquoise, purple, green, all colors, all beautiful. A dozen or so moves later and the women used their veils as partners in a dance. Much as Fred Astaire twirled a cane or Gene Kelly held high that umbrella. Just a beautiful, multi-colored dream effect in the basement of a North Fork library. But I guess that's what an art can do.

I don't have the slightest doubt dancers like Suzee Verity of Southold will be back for another session. With a purple chiffon veil swirling about her neck, shoulders and hips, Suzee looked every inch the pro. Well, almost. And she was having one heck of a good time. Not unusual on the North Fork.

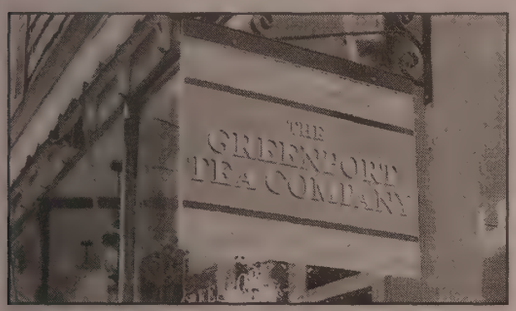
Greenport Tea Company

119A Main Street
Greenport
631-477-8744

As soon as you walk into this charming tearoom you feel transported into a different era or country. Co-owners, Jan Kirwan and chef Jeanette Holloway are now in their third season with this iconic spot, long before Greenport's current culinary boom that has been a vital part of the town's regeneration.

Open each day from 11 a.m. until late afternoon, Jan and Jeanette offer a wonderful place to meet, chat and enjoy some great homemade food. We started, as always here with their soups. Chilled carrot and ginger soup was not icy cold and this enabled the deep tastes to really come through. The ginger was not just a taste but provided a perfect balance and as we continued to find out, balance is key to the cooking here. Nothing is over the top and nothing is bland. Zucchini and goat cheese soup was even more interesting than its description. The goat cheese was still semi-solid and slowly dissolved in the fragrant base stock, making a superlative soup that we could have made a meal of, especially with some of their rightly famous homemade, light as a feather cornbread.

I love quiches, but know that, made to a classic recipe, they are very, very rich but the ham and cheddar quiche was so light and full of flavor and not made with any butter or cream, so can be enjoyed without too much guilt! The crust melted in the mouth.



They offer a really wide range of wraps and sandwiches and substantial salads. We chose the romaine, Gorgonzola, walnut, cranberry salad, dressed with a very light raspberry vinaigrette topped with grilled shrimp. This proved to be a wonderful choice because the large shrimp were seasoned and grilled to juicy perfection and the salad offered a complementary blend of crispness and saltiness from the cheese and sweetness from the fruit. Salads change each day, according to the availability of ingredients or the chef's whims but if this one is on the menu, go for it. One dish, which is on everyday now and is new this season is the BBLT sandwich. This is a variant of course on the traditional BLT and the extra B stands for creamy Brie cheese. We chose the toasted whole wheat bread and the sandwich was to die for. Yes, this one is unashamedly rich with the substantial portion of aromatic bacon and lightly melted cheese but it really is so good!

Get your English favorite summer drink of shandy (beer mixed with lemonade). As you would expect from a tearoom, they have exceptional iced teas and we chose a deep tasting raspberry/apple blend and an intriguing ginseng/peppermint version.

We managed to leave a little space for a dessert and the homemade lemon pie toped with warm blueberries made us glad that we had done so. Other desserts on offer were key lime pie, chocolate layer cake or their special chocolate truffle brownies.

Now, one of the beauties of a tearoom such as this, is that if you simply want to have something light with tea or coffee, rather than a full meal, no problem. Your only problem will be one of choice from fresh baked scones with the traditional cream and strawberry jam to assorted tea sandwiches, desserts, fruit or the very popular High Tea, which comes with something of everything. Elegantly served on a three-tired stand, together with your choice of teas. Now, choosing your tea can also pose nice problems because they list 17 teas, plus 7 decaffeinated and 6 herbal varieties (you can also choose coffee). Tea is also available for sale in many varieties and also they stock a great range of very functional, but very attractive teapots designed to brew loose tea easily and without cleanup problems. Recently they had customers who were visiting from England and they not only purchased some tea when they left but after returning home they contacted them on their website at greenportteacompany.com and had more tea sent over to them - a classic case of 'Sending tea to China' or to use an Englishism, 'Coals to Newcastle!'

They also offer a cheese and fruit tower featuring gourmet-imported cheeses, also served on the three-tiered stand.

Most items on the menu range from $4.50 for the soup to around $15 for the large salad combinations.

The high tea is $25.75 for two and the fruit and cheese tower $19.95 for two persons.

Jan and Jeannette, like myself, were born and raised in England and there is no doubt that this small gem of a restaurant is very reminiscent of the tea shops that used to abound there years ago.

Long Island Wines Shine in Napa

Several Long Island wineries successfully strutted there stuff at this years New York Food & Wine Classic competition held on August 7 & 8 at Copia—The American Center for Wine, Food & The Arts in Napa, California. Four in particular—Pindar Vineyards, Bedell Cellars, Peconic Bay Winery and Osprey's Dominion Vineyards— shined, bringing home "best of" awards for their wines.

This year's competition included 790 New York wines from Long Island, the Hudson Valley, the Finger Lakes, Niagara Escarpment, Lake Erie, and other regions of New York State. And while Long Island was shut out for the "Governor's Cup"—going to the winery who makes the wine deemed best overall by a panel of judges, and "Winery of the Year" competitions, Long Island was well represented. Thirsty Owl Wine Company won the "Governor's Cup" and Red Barn Winery rated "Winery of the Year"

Pindar Vineyards, Long Island's largest and most well-known producer won "Best Red" and "Best Cabernet Franc" for its recently released 2005 Cabernet Franc.

Bedell Cellars, was awarded "Best Merlot" for its 2005 Reserve Merlot, a ripe, big wine that will only get better with another few years time in bottle.

Peconic Bay Winery, makers of one of my favorite steel-fermented chardonnays, won "Best Oaked Chardonnay" for its 2005 La Barrique Chardonnay.

Osprey's Dominion Vineyards, took home awards for two different wines, winning "Best Vinifera Sparkling" for its 2002 Blanc de Noirs and "Best Vinifera Red Blend" for the 2002 Flight Meritage—definitely a fine choice.

In all, Long Island wineries won 121 of the 513 medals awarded at the Classic. The awards were based on blind tastings by 24 expert judges—10 from California, 6 from New York, 6 from other states, and 2 from other countries. Judges included prominent wine writers, restaurateurs, retailers, and wine educators.

Those local wines winning Double Gold, meaning every judge gave them a gold, are Bedell Cellars 2005 Taste Red, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards 2002 Roséé De Noir, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards 2002 Reserve Merlot, Peconic Bay Winery 2005 La Barrique Chardonnay, Pellegrini Vineyards 2002 Cabernet Franc, Pindar Vineyards 2005 Cabernet Franc, and Wöölffer Estate 2003 Estate Merlot

Winning Gold medals were Bedell Cellars 2005 Merlot, Lieb Family Cellars 2003 Blanc de Blanc, Macari Vineyards & Winery 2004 Merlot Reserve, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards 2004 Cabernet Franc, Osprey's Dominion Vineyards 2002 Flight Meritage, Paumanok Vineyards 2006 Semi-Dry Riesling, Paumanok Vineyards 2004 Cabernet Franc, Pindar Vineyards 2003 Merlot Reserve, Pindar Vineyards 2005 Johannisberg Riesling Ice Wine, and Roanoke Vineyards 2006 Chardonnay.

Congratulations to the local winners.

Late Library Books? No Problem

Floyd Memorial Library May Have Found The Answer To All Kinds Of Fines, Including Parking Tickets

By Phyllis Lombardi

I've got some fine news for you today. Especially if you live in Greenport and you're a slow reader. (Take no offense, Greenporters. Lots of things are slow on the North Fork. That's part of its charm.) Greenport bookworms – rejoice!

Floyd Memorial Library, that venerable institution on South Street in Greenport, is no longer collecting fines for overdue books or other items. You read me right. Lisa Richland, library director, announced the policy change and I can just hear sighs of relief from Greenport patrons who never returned the library's copies of "To Kill a Mockingbird" (1960) or the much more recent "The Killer Angels" (1974). At a dime a day, the fines for those two super books, if returned within the next few weeks, would amount to well over $2,000. Not exactly pocket change.

Maybe Lisa and the Greenport library board have the right idea. They want checked- out items returned much more than they want the $7,500 the fines bring in annually.

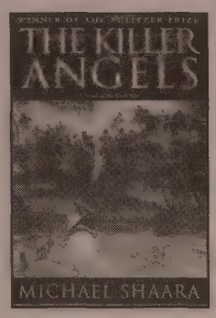
I spoke with Poppy Johnson, Floyd Memorial's assistant director, who is hopeful about the new no-fine arrangement. She said there's a jar on the circulation desk meant for overdue book borrowers just in case they'd like to make a thank-you-for-understanding offering. Poppy said it's too early to evaluate the plan's success although some Greenporters have called the library voicing their approval. And yes, although the plan is going strong in other parts of the country, Poppy said she believes Floyd Memorial is the first Long Island library to start it up. Well, good luck, Floyd Memorial. It's not the first time Greenport's come up creative.

Now I wonder about other North Fork fines. There's no question it's a law-abiding group of folks from Riverhead to Orient. But occasionally one of us slips up and a fine is imposed. For example, there are fines for motor vehicle infractions, for letting stuff pile up on your property, for trespassing.

And when it snows there are fines for not shoveling. There are all kinds of fines for building code violations and illegal dumping. If you're out on the water, the fines still apply. You can't discharge anything into the Peconic, the Long Island Sound, or our bays and creeks. I heard something about fines for cutting down a tree without permission even if it's on your property. I'm not sure about that, though. Maybe it's just for a tree that has a bird's nest in it or one that has a swing attached to a lower limb. That's pure North Fork.

Guess you know where I'm going here. Inspired by Lisa Richland of Floyd Memorial, I'm proposing the elimination of all fines on the North Fork. Or at least a one-year moratorium until we see how it works out. I hesitate to ask other North Forkers about their fine history. That's pretty personal. But I suspect their offenses are tame, much like mine. So disposing of fines would do no harm and we'd have happier, richer residents.

Now I occasionally litter my yard. It's like this. I go out to clip some bushes and see some weeds that need digging. I put down the shears and go to the garage for a trowel. On my way back to the weeds I spy tomato plants needing water. Down goes the trowel as I search for the sprinkler. And so it goes. By the end of this particular gardening session, I've misplaced shears, trowel and other assorted tools that won't be found for days – and certainly not until they've been rained on. Point is, I've got stuff piled in my yard that doesn't belong there. I could be fined.



I offend in other areas, too. I think I do some illegal dumping and endanger vehicular traffic at the same time.

I'll set the scene. It's January and a snowstorm just ended. Out I go with the shovel to start in on the 10-12 inches. Finally I get to the bottom of my driveway and come face to face with a chunky, icy barricade almost two-feet high. The good guys who plow our roads (and I'm grateful, believe me) have done it again. Pushed the white stuff right across my driveway. It's like I have to chop my way through a mountain.

And I do so. Shovelful by shovelful I toss the mountain into the road, trying to distribute it evenly so it doesn't look suspicious. But I was almost done in last winter. A plow guy came through a second time, saw what I was doing, and shook a scolding finger at me. If he'd reported me to the police I probably would have been fined. I'll have to be more careful.

I don't think we need any more illustrations of North Fork fines. What we do need is librarian Lisa to go to Riverhead and Southold town halls and plead our case for no fines. She's smart and she's tactful. Good. Otherwise they might throw the book at her.

Toy Recall And The North Fork

Recalling Some Toys That North Forkers All Love And Adore

By Phyllis Lombardi

Toy recall. We've seen much about it in the newspapers recently. The big guys like Mattel and Fisher-Price have, over the past months, recalled more than 10 million toys. Toys containing tiny magnets that might be swallowed by youngsters, toys containing toxic lead paint. About 80 percent of toys sold here at home are made overseas. I guess far-away toy people don't have as many regulations. Or maybe they ignore them.

You know, it's kind of funny-sad to me. Years back, whenever I heard the words "toy recall," I had many moments of pleasure. Of joy. For those words meant only one thing then. The toys of my youth, put away so long ago, unpacked again, so to speak.

Toy recall. Not so hard to remember, really. Most of us had only a few toys (unlike my grandchildren) and I don't think anyone ever recalled them. Well, my mother, maybe. She'd tell me to get that Monopoly game off the kitchen table or move my roller skates away from the back door. My father would be home soon and he might trip over them.

Certainly my little rubber ball was never recalled. I played with it every darned day. The game was called Russia and it involved throwing the ball against the side of my house and doing all sorts of twists and turns before the ball bounced back to me. Marilyn, my across-the-street friend, played the game with me. She lives in Fresno, California now. When we talk, we often toy recall.

Don't get me wrong. There are lots of fine toys on the market now. They must be fine – look how much they cost. And one day they'll be recalled fondly, I suppose, as I recall the little ball.

North Fork toy recall? All over the place. And not necessarily by folks over 40.

For example, there's Cutchogue's Alex Kluko. Alex just graduated from Cutchogue East Elementary School and is now a student at Mattituck-Cutchogue Junior High School. She recalls several toys of her early childhood. (And she is mature enough now to admit some of those toys are still in her life.) Alex was a jump-rope kid, either by herself or with a neighborhood pal or two. On rainy days it was Chinese checkers or that old, ever-new kid-card game, Go Fish. I recall that, too, Alex. So much fun.

Finally, Alex had, still has, a basketball. She sees it now as more than a toy and hopes to get on a junior high basketball team. Often Alex shoots baskets with her father. He has a height advantage, said Alex. Otherwise she'd be just as good as daddy.

Now meet Riverhead's Steve Richard. He's a big guy, over six feet tall, but he had to be little once, right? And Steve recalled those days for me, especially the days when he played with his very special toys.

They were blocks, just pine blocks. But all 60, maybe more, of them were made by his father. Dad cut the wood into various lengths and widths, sanded the blocks, no-lead painted them. Talk about love!

And what did Steve build with those blocks? Seems like everything. What was most fun, said Steve, was to stand still (that's hard for a 5-year old kid) and have Dad build up a house of blocks around his son.

Talk to Florence Taylor of Southold. She'll tell you about her tiny child-size table that even had a leaf in it. On rainy days Florence's mom would take two china teacups from a closet and prepare a mom-and-me tea party.

That meant tea brewed in a special teapot. And cookies, lots of them, made by mom. Florence liked her mother's shortbread cookies best. If I'd been there I would've reached for the chocolate. Florence knows now, she said, that there can never be a government recall of a mother's love.

You've hit on something there, Florence. You and Alex and Steve recall the toys you shared, especially with your parents. Your toys were simple. Didn't have to be imported or inspected. Certainly never taken off the market.

And yes, they are the toys stored in the heart of a child grown older.

JUST FOR KIDS

EAST END KID:
RIDE 'EM COWGIRL

By Emily Hart Post

With a little help from Katlean de Monchy and David Post

If you see this column often then you know that I tell readers about the Family Day Carnival every summer. This year we mosied up to the Diamond Ranch for Wild West Day to benefit the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. It is a fantasy day for kids with so many activities. Let's see what did I do – some amusement rides, quite a few pony rides, games, lots of eats, freeze dancing, wagon ride, petty zoo (of course), and wore out both Dad and Mom. Last year we won the silent auction to win a trip to Disney World but this year someone else won. Shucks.

LAST CHANCE TO SPEND A COOL DAY WITH EMILY

If you send an email to david@starinme.com and give us a little info you still can win a day with Emily and get into the column. This is the final week.

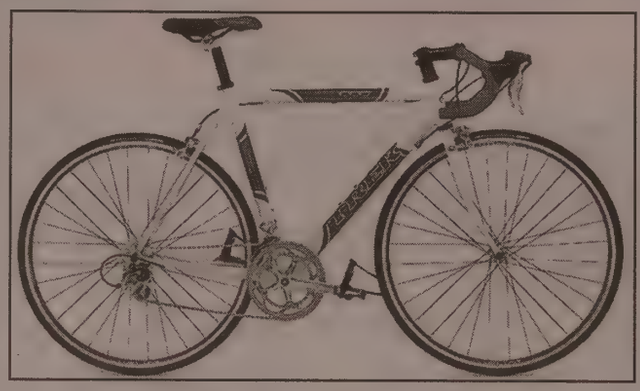
CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

Prices are really getting crazy. Just last week, Steve McQueen's 1964 Ferrari Lusso Berlinetta was sold at auction for over two million dollars. What caught my attention about that sale price was the fact that in 1967 I owned a Ferrari Lusso, which coincidentally was the exact color combination of McQueen's. Having purchased the car in Italy from the Ferrari dealer in Florence for $4,200, I had it shipped back to America and used it for several absolutely trouble free years, in and around Manhattan and the Hamptons. It was a great car, considered by many, including myself, to be the most attractive of the 250 GT series of Ferrari motorcars. But more than two million dollars? The McQueen ownership obviously gave it a stellar provenance. I sold mine for $5,000 around 1970, it was low mileage and perfect. Should I have kept it?



Everything is getting weirdly expensive. Yes, I know, all you Hampton home owners, especially those who have owned their home for over ten years, have suddenly become happy millionaires. But if you sell your home, what do you buy? It's the same fate of the collector car owner. Wow, the guy has a valuable car, but if he sells it, he can never replace it with a similar model, unless he wants to reinvest his profit. Most people who own a house in the Hamptons, or for that matter, a high quality collectable like a vintage Ferrari, are not eager to sell and trade down to a house in Riverhead or a Mazda Miata.

I recently spoke with a friend who told me that his cousin just spent $80,000 on a custom van. Of course, he didn't tell his wife the real price, she would have killed him. I personally have flown an airplane, along with some buddies, from Brookhaven airport to one of many airports in Connecticut for a snack. Including the airplane rental and fuel, these flights are commonly called the $100 burger trip. Anyone who flies an airplane knows that this type of expense is usually kept from one's spouse. What about the guy who owns a twin engine sport fishing boat? If he takes the boat from Montauk to the "Canyon" for some serious fishing, the fuel bill alone is something he doesn't want to mention. What one catches is usually called the $1,000 fish. It actually makes flying a plane look cheap. It's a man thing. How many of you out there have done restorations or even simple paint jobs or repairs on a car that were so expensive you were not only scared to tell your wife, but close relatives. The weird truth is that you usually bragged about the price only to your car buddies. If it was really expensive, the repair or paint job had to be the best. Right?

Let me give you guys out there some food for thought, clues from the other side. My wife, who really looks like a model, reads Harper's Bazaar monthly. She occasionally peruses my Road and Track magazines, once in a while I glance at her Harper's Bazaar. After all, the models in there are pretty. What caught my attention were the insane prices of some of the woman's clothes and accessories. Get this, a Ferragamo handbag – $17,000. That's the cost of a Honda! A pair of Bottega Veneta sandals – $1,000, not much there with little, skimpy straps and Diesel jeans for $400. Denim is denim, what are they, crazy? It dawned on me that while we guys are hiding our "hobby" expenses, so are the girls. Their hobby is shopping. In all honesty, both my wife and I do look aghast at the prices of clothing and accessories in the high fashion magazines. Seeing these cadaverous models in their mega dollar, flowing designer outfits is no different than looking at terrific and absurdly sleek concept cars that have $200,000 plus price tags. We all know the odds are that we will never own any of them. Both men and women like to dream and often spend outrageous sums, but on very different items.

Forget cars, bicycles are a small fortune these days. Remember those affordable Schwinns of the past? Of course, you can still buy a very presentable Huffy at Costco for $69.95. But today, a proper and serious bicycle costs $10,000. What has Lance Armstrong wrought? What we used to call "English Racers" are made of expensive carbon fiber and other high tech materials. The fastest, lightest and most expensive bicycles weigh less than fourteen pounds. For the best of the best, $10,000 is a starting price. Pound for pound, a proper bike costs more than the most expensive Ferrari. Hey, these bikes do get excellent fuel mileage.

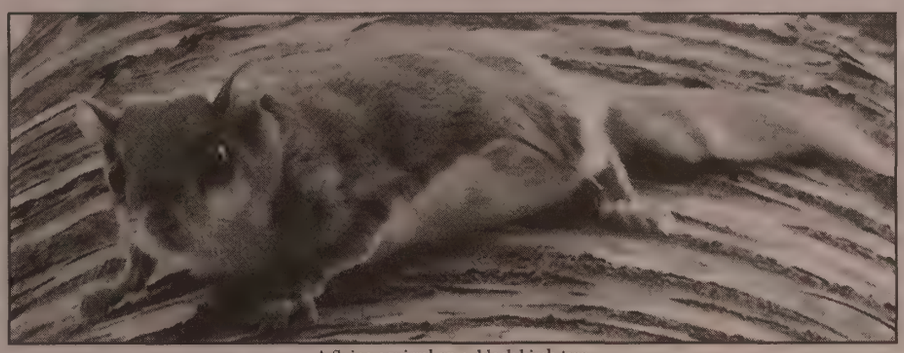
Take a Hike with Ken Kindler

A Path into Nature

Last week I walked a section of the Paumanok Path (PP) that's in a residential area between Noyac and Roses Grove with fellow Southampton Trails Preservation Society Board member, Tony Garro. The natural beauty of this area, so close to development always impresses me. We parked our cars on Deerfield Road in Noyac, across from Laurel Valley County Park. The wide shoulders on either side of the road can accommodate parking for several cars. The Suffolk County Water Authority plans to erect a well here with a blowoff basin, chemical treatment building, and a modest parking area for hikers. The SCWA and SCP are assuring the public that these changes will have as little negative visual and environmental impact on this lovely park as possible.



A flying squirrel on a black birch tree.

Walking across Deerfield Road from Laurel Valley I wasn't able to see where the PP enters the woods alongside Deerwood Path. I remember painting a white rectangular blaze on a huge birch tree a couple of years ago at the entrance to North Side Hills. This tree has since been cut down. That day, after painting the blaze and affixing the PP emblem to the tree, I heard a scrabbling noise above me. I looked up, and saw looking down at me with keen interest, a flying squirrel. It stayed perfectly still, a few feet above me, gazing with its enormous, night-vision adapted eyes. I took a camera out of my backpack and proceeded to take his picture. Now that that tree is gone, visibility is improved for motorists turning right out of North Side Hills, but the blaze and PP emblem need to be restored on another tree. I trust the squirrel has found other trees in which to play.

The trail runs alongside Deerwood Path (the entry road to North Side Hills) and takes an arc around a vernal pond, through a field of fern, then onto the road. Tony and I followed the Paumanok Path through the residential community and discussed how to make the trail safe, easy-to-follow, and visually attractive. We came out onto Deerwood Path, turned left, then continued on the road, making a left onto Northside Drive. Just past the Rolling Hill Court intersection with Northside Drive the trail enters the woods on the left side of the road, heading south. Here we get a sample of the lovely knob and kettle topography, as well as the mature laurel that must have been the inspiration for the name of this community and its streets. The trail comes out for a while onto Rolling Hill Court as a right turn onto the road then a left back into the woods. In this small enclave of nature there lingers a diverse ecology; you will see fern, laurel, oak, hickory, sassafras, beech, birch, and dogwood growing here. The brush layer is sparse because the dense canopy overhead blocks much of the sunlight. We followed the white rectangular blazes of the PP to Laurel Valley Drive, where we turned right for a walk to the end of the road. The PP blazes led us straight ahead onto a wide straight dirt path heading west. The trail continues west until it cuts across the end of Forrest Drive in Roses Grove, linking another community to the path.

There is a kiosk on Deerfield Rd. marking the Laurel Valley County Park in Noyac. It is opposite the entrance to North Side Hills (Deerwood Path), 0.7 mile south of Noyac Rd. To get to the Forrest Drive trailhead from Noyac Road, take Peconic Hills Drive to Woodland Drive, then follow Forrest Drive to its end. Tony left for another appointment and I returned to walk this lovely 1.5-mile section of trail again. This time I saw someone running the trail and I thought that if I lived here I might start jogging again or at least take part of my daily walk in this pretty place.

This time of year, remember that the ticks are out in large numbers. When you walk the trails always wear light colored pants tucked into closely-woven, light-colored socks. If used as directed, permethrin-based insect repellents are very effective against ticks. If you encounter a trail that is overgrown with brush or tall grass, turn around and walk somewhere else where the trail is more open.

Go Fish

An article in a regional fishing weekly recently noted stress is reaching epidemic proportions in the U.S. Clinical psychologist Dr. Paul G. Quinnett has written several books on the psychological benefits of fishing as a stress reliever. We already knew this! Let's fish.

This past Sunday, the Montauk charter boat Breakaway brought in 25 striped bass weighing up to 40 pounds, and "gorilla" bluefish weighing up to 10 to 15 pounds. Chris at West Lake Fishing Marina, Montauk, says a mako shark of 368 pounds was caught by Tod Heppen. There are also lots of yellowfin tuna offshore at the Fishtails (40-50 pounds), and Chris said a few boats went as far out as Cokes Ledge and caught codfish of up to 28 pounds.

Paulie A. of Paulie's Tackle Shop in Montauk reports striped bass weighing up to 19 pounds were caught on the north side of the Point this past weekend. He says there are also plenty of bluefish in the bays and in the ocean surf. Tom at Gone Fishing Marina, Montauk, says many yellowfin tuna have been brought in and weighed at his dock.

Steve at WeGo Fishing Station, Southold, says there are striped bass being caught at night at The Race and Plum Gut, and bluefish are everywhere in the bays. He weighed in a nine-pound and six-pound fluke caught by boat off the Greenlawns area of Shelter Island. Steve also says there is a lot of bunker bait in Sterling Harbor.

Harvey Bennett of Amagansett's Tackle Shop reports false albacore are starting to show up in Gardiner's Bay. His friend Sam Lester caught a 27-inch fluke off Shelter Island's Greenlawns. (A monster "doormat fluke," weighing 24.3 pounds and measuring 38 inches long, was caught near Monmouth Beach, New Jersey, recently. If the International Game Fish Association certifies this catch, it will be a record catch.)

Ken Morse of Tight Lines Tackle, Sag Harbor, says weakfish are still in Noyac Bay at red buoy #16 in 55-foot depths. The fish are biting on two- to three-ounce diamond jigs tipped with squid strips. He also reports bluefish of six to ten pounds are being caught at The Ruins north of Gardiner's Island.

Steve at Hampton Bays' East End Bait and Tackle finds fluke action has moved outside Shinnecock Inlet to the 90-foot depth and east to the Mecox Bay inlet. The fluke are biting on killies or baby bluefish (snappers) caught in the bays. Fluking inside Shinnecock Bay has slowed, but bluefish are all over – just look for the birds circling above them.

A new local fishing tournament open to all adults and children was just announced: Southampton Cove Fishing Tournament. It is one day only, Saturday, September 8, starting at sunrise with final weigh-in at 4:30 p.m. the same day. There will be prizes awarded for the largest striped bass and bluefish caught that day, and a children's prize for the largest porgy and snapper (baby bluefish). Fishing can be by boat or in the surf in Great Peconic Bay, Noyac Bay, Sag Harbor bay and Shelter Island Sound.

Registration is $10 per adult; children twelve and under compete at no charge. Competitors can enter only one fish per species. The weigh-in is at the Southampton Cove's pavilion on Water's Edge Rd., Southampton (east side of Fish Cove, off Noyac Road and North Sea Harbor). Prizes for first and second place in both divisions are rod and reel combos from Tight Lines Tackle, Sag Harbor, and gift certificates for third-place finishers. To enter, contact Peter Aiello at (631) 283-5228.

40 Years of Ralph Lauren

"If you say something is 'very Ralph Lauren' you're immediately understood," Audrey Hepburn once remarked. Whether it's summering in Newport and the Hamptons, roughing it out West with cowboys and ranchers, hitting the slopes in ski-meccas like Aspen, or enjoying a glamorous life in the glittering city – Ralph Lauren has codified the iconography of America into a singular vision.

2007 marks the fortieth year of the Ralph Lauren design juggernaut, and to fête the occasion, Lauren is celebrating with a luxurious book documenting his spectacular four-decade metamorphosis from tie salesman to fashion mogul. Since 1967, Ralph Lifshitz from the Bronx has transformed his name, his image and his line of men's neckwear into an ever-expanding lifestyle brand that now includes fashion, accessories, home furnishings and fragrances. "Fashion is a function of lifestyle, and style a function of quality, integrity and timelessness," notes the designer, who compiled more than 750 photographs, personal mementos, news clippings and illustrations into a 500-page behemoth – as beefy as his fashion legacy and just as personal.

"My eyes are on my life. They are my own private camera," writes the author about the influence of living and working in New York City, being married to Ricky and family life with three kids in the Hamptons, an island retreat in Jamaica, the RRL Ranch in Colorado, and an estate in upstate New York. "I extend all the experiences from my private life into my work because that is my library."

The public face of the company is innovative lifestyle advertising, created in collaboration with an elite group of photographers including Michael Thompson, Shelia Metzner, François Halard, Patrick Demarchelier, Deborah Turbeville, and Oberto Gili. Bruce Weber, in particular, was instrumental in establishing the trademark Lauren look: a reflection of New England with all-American men and women setting sail in an old wooden schooner, dressed for dinner in gorgeously-appointed rooms, or preparing for a ride on one of the family's show-horses; sleekly-attired athletes kitted out for skiing St Moritz; tanned, camera-ready adventurers on African safari in crisp khaki & cool cottons; a rugged West involving faded and well-worn flannels layered with calico prints, denim, thermal shirts and boots; and the Southwest of American Indians with blanket wool coats, fringed suede and turquoise jewelry.

"When I design a collection I have a character in mind. I'll say, 'Who is she? Where does she live? When I work on a collection I feel like I'm making a movie. I want to tell a story, so I guess you could say I write through my clothes."

And yet, despite acclaim, fortune and fame – including a thriving global brand with a far-flung network of stores in Russia, Tokyo, London, Paris, Milan, Spain, Germany, Hong Kong, Australia; a fancy hometown flagship in New York's historic Rhinelander Mansion on Madison Avenue; a wall full of CFDA awards: Lifetime Achievement, Womenswear & Menswear Designer of the Year, Retailer of the Year, Humanitarian Leadership, and, most recently, the inaugural American Fashion Legend Award – what drives Ralph Lauren has remained the same since the days before his name was an adjective. "My vision continues to be as it was in the beginning. It hasn't changed. I don't want what I created in 1967 to be old, and what I created in 2007 to be new."

Ralph Lauren will be released October 16, 2007, but is currently available for pre-order at Amazon.com.

The Top 3 Must-Have's from the Ralph Lauren Fall 2007 collection:

1. SLINKY BLACK PENCIL SKIRTS – The timeless secret weapon in the femme fatale arsenal.

2. LITTLE BLACK DRESS – Please, you can never have too many of these.

3. SOFT SUIT – A feminine, gathered full-skirt and unbuttoned attitude is the freshest way to suit up.

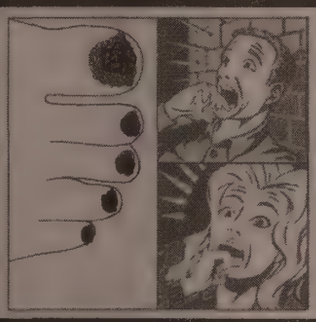
EMBARRASSED BY FUNGAL TOENAILS?



If you are embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails at the beach or while swimming at the pool, we can help you! A severe fungal infection is a serious medical condition, requiring treatment. This problem will gradually get worse and will not go away by itself. Fungal Toenails are contagious and should be treated promptly. I have treated this condition hundreds and hundreds of times from my original practice in Manhattan, (Yorkville) and now in my office in Babylon Village. We have guided hundreds of patients who thought they would never get rid of this problem to obtain dramatic improvements and often normal toenails following treatment of their fungal conditions. We often treat very severe cases with dramatic results. Every patient is different and your healing ability, age and severity of your condition are all factors that may influence your outcome. This is by far the most common problem that I see in my office. If you have this problem call us and we will help you!!

We are located in beautiful Babylon Village directly South of Argyle Lake. We proudly serve Babylon Village and the surrounding areas with a brand new clean modern facility in a picturesque setting in an upscale community. Our facility has a large private parking lot for easy parking.

We Commonly Treat Severe Fungal Infections Of The Toenails.

If you have fungal toenails you should be aware that this problem is contagious and should be treated promptly. I have seen many children infected most likely from their parents. This problem could have been completely avoided by prompt treatment. Also the fungus infection will spread from toenail to toenail. This can develop into a serious problem with severe fungal nails that are thickened, discolored and odiferous causing pain with secondary bacterial infection. Early treatment is important and is much easier to treat. Many patients have come in to ask about laser treatment of their foot problems. I received in-depth comprehensive training in Newport Beach, California on CO2 Lasers and their use in the treatment of common soft tissue problems (warts, fungal & ingrown toe nails) occurring of the foot. The tremendous benefits that laser treatment could offer for your condition are many. As a surgeon my preference is to use the laser when possible. It is an advanced technology that reduces morbidity, usually eliminates hospitalization and provides better patient care. If you are a younger patient and are suffering from unsightly recalcitrant (hard to eliminate) fungal toenails, a minor surgery followed up with an application of antifungal medication directly to the nail bed may be used to help significantly reduce and may also help eliminate persistent fungal infections. Excellent results are commonly seen following treatment of this condition. Healthy clear toenails are a general indicator of good health and there is no more need to be embarrassed by unsightly fungal toenails. Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day to Showcase Local Singers

WLIU Contest Winner to Perform the National Anthem

The $20,000 Nicolock Time Challenge and the Hampton Classic/WLIU 88.3 FM National Anthem Contest will headline Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day activities at the Hampton Classic Horse Show on Sunday, August 26.

The 32nd Hampton Classic Horse Show, one of the nation's premier show jumping competitions, returns to Bridgehampton, August 26-September 2. The Classic hosts hunter/jumper competition for riders ranging from the youngest competitors in Leadline and Short Stirrup all the way up to the Olympic veterans in the $150,000 FTI Grand Prix.

A new addition to this year's horse show is the opportunity for the winner of the Hampton Classic/WLIU 88.3 FM National Anthem Contest to perform the National Anthem on Manhattan Mortgage's Opening Day. The winner will be decided by three judges: Bonnie Grice of WLIU-FM, Jaylaan Llewellyn, President of bluhammock music, and Helen Rattray, publisher of the East Hampton Star and member of the Board of Directors of the Choral Society of the Hamptons. Applications were due by August 1 and all finalists were notified by August 10.

Finalists will compete in a live "sing off" at the Hampton Classic on August 26 at 10 a.m. The winner will perform the anthem in the Grand Prix Ring, be interviewed on WLIU-FM by Bonnie Grice, and receive a gift certificate to the Hampton Classic souvenir booth and a collection of CDs from bluhammock music. All finalists will receive four one-week passes to the Hampton Classic, which will allow each finalist and three guests to attend the horse show from August 26 through September 2.

Olympian Joe Fargis judged the Leadline Class during Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day

"Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day is one of the Hampton Classic's most beloved traditions," said Hampton Classic Executive Director Shanette Barth Cohen. "The ceremonies feature a variety of attractions for the whole family and marks the kick-off of our week long extravaganza that is the Hampton Classic."

Competition on Manhattan Mortgage Company's Opening Day features hundreds of Long Island competitors and begins at 8 a.m. in every arena, with exception of the Grand Prix Ring which starts at 9 a.m. with the Leadline classes, where nearly 100 youngsters under the age of 8 and their ponies hold center stage in the morning before giving way to the Opening Day Ceremony at noon.

Headlining Opening Day is the $20,000 Nicolock Time Challenge, a competition that debuted at the Classic in 2003, beginning at 1 p.m. More than thirty top show jumping riders and horses are expected to compete in the fifth annual running of this popular speed jumping class. Last year, Todd Minikus of Loxahatchee, FL negotiated the Conrad Homfeld designed course in a blistering time of 64.37 seconds riding Eltonn, owned by Tracey Topping of Wellington, FL, to win the class.

HorseAbility Event Returns to Hampton Classic

Hampton Classic Horse Show to Host Finals for Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities on Monday, August 27

Equestrians who compete in the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities (LIHSSRD) will once again have the opportunity to ride for ribbons at The Hampton Classic Horse Show on Monday, August 27.

The LIHSSRD made its debut at the Hampton Classic last year, marking the first time in the horse show's three-decade history that competition was held on Monday. The show series, created by HorseAbility, was founded to provide riders with disabilities the same competitive experience that other equestrians enjoy.

"The LIHSSRD championships proved to be a very successful addition to our Hampton Classic schedule," said Hampton Classic Executive Director Shanette Barth Cohen. "The rain almost forced us to cancel, but the resilience and determination of the riders to go on was the ultimate factor in our decision to continue as scheduled."

The LIHSSRD competition at the Hampton Classic will be the culmination of the organization's five-show series, which were held at select horse shows on Long Island during the spring and summer of 2007. Qualifying shows included:

April 21–Thomas School of Horsemanship Horse Show (Melville)

June 10 – Glen Head Horse Show (Muttontown)

June 24 – Salt River Farms Horse Show (Center Moriches)

July 29 – Salt River Farms Horse Show (Center Moriches)

August 14 – Glen Head Horse Show (Muttontown)

Riders compete in classes such as walk, walk/trot, and walk/trot/figure 8 and are awarded points according to USEF rules for equitation classes. The top 10 competitors in each division, assisted riders and independent riders, will qualify for the finals at the Hampton Classic.

Last year, Danielle Jacobs, 22, of Nesconset, NY rode away with top honors in the Equitation "Independent" Division and Victoria Natale, 14, of Bayville, NY won the championship in the Equitation "With Aides" Division.

HorseAbility was founded in 1993 by Kathleen (Katie) Kilcommons McGowan when she lent her horse to a friend and physical therapist who used therapeutic riding as a method of treatment for a child with cerebral palsy. When Ms. McGowan saw the child's physical and emotional connection with the animal and subsequent acceleration in his treatment, she knew she had found her calling. Combining her education, love of children, and long-standing relationship with horses, she founded HorseAbility.

Danielle Jacobs of Nesconset, NY was named Champion of the Equitation "Independent" Division at the Inaugural Finals of the Long Island Horse Show Series for Riders with Disabilities

Since then, the organization has became a New York Not-for-Profit Corporation and is one of only two "premier centers" on Long Island as accredited by the North American Riding for the Handicapped Association. Its mission is to offer a wide range of horse-related programs to those with special needs in order to promote their physical and spiritual well-being.

"We are thrilled to have our Finals at the Hampton Classic," said McGowan. "We couldn't think of a better place, it's the Hampton Classic! Shanette welcomed us with open arms last year and it was such a great experience. We hope to have even more riders participating this year!"

"Cool Blue" by Noted Fashion Photographer Steven Klein is Selected as Image for 2007 Hampton Classic Official Poster

A black and white image by renowned fashion photographer Steven Klein (who has photographed such iconic celebrities as Madonna, Brat Pitt, Beyonce, Hilary Swank, Usher, Pharrell, the Rolling Stones, Justin Timberlake and Victoria & David Beckham) has been selected as the image for the 2007 Hampton Classic Horse Show poster.

The 32nd Hampton Classic Horse Show, one of the nation's premier show jumping competitions, returns to Bridgehampton August 26-September 2. The Classic hosts exciting hunter/jumper competition from junior levels up to the pinnacle of the sport, grand prix show jumping, featuring the $150,000 FTI Grand Prix.

Klein's black and white image "Cool Blue" is only the second time the Hampton Classic has used a photograph for its poster image in more than 30 years. In keeping with his reputation as being both daring and non-traditional, Klein chooses to focus only the horse's sleekly braided neck as opposed to capturing the entire body of the animal.

Klein is best known for his celebrity portraiture that transforms his viewer's understanding of his famed subjects. Klein has many famous museum and gallery solo exhibitions to his name – most notably with "X-STaTIC PRO=CeSS," a video installation/collaboration with Madonna, first shown in 2003 at Deitch Projects in New York City (it has since traveled around the world to Sao Paulo, Berlin, Dusseldorf, Munich, Moscow, Tokyo, and this November the Art Sonje Museum in Seoul, Korea).

His exhibition "Case Study #13," a 2005 collaboration with Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie was first shown at the Gagosian Gallery in Beverly Hills, CA. It was also shown in Berlin and is due to show in Tokyo in early 2008. He has transformed magazines into virtual gallery spaces, radically re-imagining the role of fashion and celebrity photography in the public sphere. His images have been published in American Vogue, L'Uomo Vogue, W, and Arena Hommes.

Klein trained as a painter at the Rhode Island School of Design, and began his photography career in Paris with a commission from Dior. He has since worked with Calvin Klein, Alexander McQueen, Tom Ford, and Dolce & Gabbana. He resides and works in New York City.

The 2007 Hampton Classic poster is available online at www.hamptonclassic.com or on site in the Boutique Garden at the horse show. It can also be purchased at various art galleries on the East End including Giraffics, Hampton Photo Arts, Harrison Frame Shop, Mark Humphrey's, and the Southampton Hospital Thrift Shop. From August 25 through September 18, The Vered Gallery located at 68 Park Place in East Hampton will be featuring an exhibition by Klein entitled Horses. When the Hampton Classic returns, August 26 – September 2, it will celebrate its 32nd anniversary with more than 70 corporate sponsors drawn from virtually every sector of the business world – fashion, finance, luxury brands, publishing, real estate, and television. The Classic's impressive sponsorship roster includes such long-time supporters as Calvin Klein (1980), Jaguar (1997), Land Rover (1989), David Yurman (1996), Manhattan Mortgage Company (1996), Sotheby's International Realty (1999), and Wölffer Estate Vineyards (1991). FTI Consulting, sponsor of the $30,000 7- & 8-year-old Young Jumper Championship Finals at the Hampton Classic in 2006, is a global business advisory firm dedicated to helping organizations protect and enhance enterprise value. "This increased sponsorship is further evidence of FTI's leadership and commitment to the equestrian industry. review: the lady in question at bay street theatre... by jān silver Bay Street Theatre's final summer mainstage production, Charles Busch's satire, The Lady In Question, opened last weekend at the Sag Harbor playhouse. Busch is known for his high-camp comedies in which he often stars in gorgeous drag. I am one of his fans, but the satire is showing its age – or, perhaps, I've have moved beyond its too obvious camp. Now almost twenty years old, this melodramatic spoof of Nazis, militarism, art and artists feels heavy-handed. Mel Brooks satirized these same subjects with a lighter touch in the Springtime for Hitler scenes in both his 1968 movie and 2001 musical, The Producers.

As with all Bay Street Theatre productions, this staging is done at the highest professional level. The polished cast carries off its over-the-top lines in deadpan fashion. The handsome costumes by Dona Granata are luxurious and look authentically 1940s. Katherine Carr's wigs for Mr. Busch and Julie Halston are divine, and Derek McLane's Alpine castle and mountains are darkly threatening.

Charles Busch plays Gertrude Garnet, a former Brooklyn vaudeville tootsie turned classical pianist, now on a European concert tour. In a flaming red wig and chic costumes, Gertrude confronts a Nazi and throatily declares: "You may have taken the Maginot line, but you'll never take the Canarsie line!" (That's the level of humor.)

Richard Kind is amusing as Baron Wilhelm Von Elsner, the area's Nazi commander who is smitten with Gertrude and also has a mother issue. Candy Buckley displays brilliant comic timing and does great stage business in her dual role as the Baron's mother, Augusta Von Elsner, and the prisoner, actress Raina Aldric. Matt McGrath almost steals all scenes he appears in as the homicidal preteen Lotte Von Elsner, and Julie Halston is funny in her too brief part as Gertrude's sidekick Kitty, Countess de Borgia.

The accomplished cast is completed, in strong supporting roles, by Larry Keith as Professor Mittelhoffer and Dr. Maximilian, the delicious Ana Reeder as his daughter Heidi, handsome Barrett Foa as Heidi's teenage amour and budding Nazi, Karel Freiser, and the dashing Perry Ojeda as Raina Aldric's son Professor Erik Maxwell.

Broadway director Christopher Ashley keeps the onstage action humming at a quick tempo. Philip Rosenberg did the fine lighting design, Tony Smolenski and Walter Trarbach did the sound design. The show plays in two acts.

The Lady In Question runs Tuesday to Sunday evenings with Wednesday and Saturday matinees through September 2. Tickets ($50-65) are sold at the box office (631-725-9500) and online at www.baystreet,org. Comediennes Julie Halston, Joy Behar and Angela LaGreca are doing an 11 p.m. "Three Gals Undone" standup show ($50) this Saturday, August 25, after the play's performance, and the documentary Charles Busch Is The Lady In Question will be screened after the Saturday, September 1, performance.

YOUR WEEKLY GUIDE TO FUN IN THE HAMPTONS

Picasso at the Lapin Agile at Guild Hall

Some cast members of Picasso at the Lapin Agile

Fans of comic actor/screenwriter/novelist/playwright Steve Martin should enjoy the John Drew Theater's production of his imaginative, zany comedy Picasso at the Lapin Agile. Theatergoers who like a little slapstick served up with some intellectual punditry might also enjoy this 1993 play which first deputed at Chicago's celebrated Steppenwolf Theater and continued on to moderate success Off Broadway.

Martin sets the action in 1904, just before Albert Einstein and Pablo Picasso separately introduced similar groundbreaking concepts in science and art: how one views an object or observes it in space depends completely on the viewer's perspective – there are no fixed absolutes. (Einstein published his theory of relativity in 1905, and Picasso introduced cubism in 1907.)

Steve Martin posits these two meeting at the real Parisian bar frequented by Picasso, the Lapin Agile. The resulting clash of ideas and egos, involving several persons in the bar as well as the two geniuses, is often clever,witty, and sometimes downright silly – all hallmarks of "wild and crazy" Steve Martin style.

Since this is a comedy of ideas with shtick characters who are one- or two-dimensional, Martin lets each one introduce themselves in a brief monologue. Joshua Perl, as Freddy the bartender, is first onstage. Freddy also serves as a sometime narrator, commentator, stage manager and, on occasion, interactor with the audience. He is quickly followed by Gaston (Gerard Doyle), a regular patron and older Maurice Chevalier type who has some of the play's best double-entendre dialogue. Next to enter is Freddy's barmaid/companion Germaine (Kate Mueth), a savvy, earthy woman who delivers the playwright's straightforward assessment of the future – with marketing strategy – in deadpan Carla-of-"Cheers" style.

By the time Josh Gladstone enters as Einstein, a little comic excitement is needed – and Gladstone comes through, right down to the lived-in suit, bushy mustache, wild hair and Teutonic accent. He is a delightfully engaging Einstein, especially when reciting the "e-pie" monologue. Next, lithesome, blond Ann Moller bustles in as Suzanne, a recent Picasso conquest looking for her lover. She performs her introductory aria with hopeful grace and aplomb. Enter suave Sagot (Kameron Steele), a wily art dealer who explains why he is necessary to the art business.

When Picasso (Joe DeSane) finally arrives, he must be a galvanizing, passionate personality to counteract all the other characters onstage. At the final preview performance, De Sane came across as an intense, self-confident, self-centered, womanizing Picasso. He soon takes on Einstein, and the two become great foils for one another.

The comedy turns truly absurdist with the entrance of Schmnediman (an antic Jonathan Peters), followed shortly thereafter by an explosive mid-20th-century Visitor (Nick Fondulis, who brilliantly parodies this real-life character). The Visitor, immediately recognizable, is totally out of place in 1904 Paris, but the future he foretells is now so outrageously true – remember, this play is written in the early 1990s – Steve Martin's absurdism seems clairvoyant. (Are we witnessing the decline of America?)

Director/actor/producer Josh Gladstone heads a cast of professionals who have worked together before and are starting to mesh as an ensemble. He and his backstage staff have created a viable thrust-stage theater within the vast East Hampton Studios'soundstage: Nicole Coppinger's inviting Lapin Agile bar, Andrew Nagel's sound design, Sebastian Paczynski's lighting, Amy Ritchings costumes and Steve Smith's technical tricks all lead to usher the audience in. Audience seating is open – theatergoers can sit at stageside tables or in rows fanning out from the elevated stage. There is not a bad seat in the house.

Picasso at the Lapin Agile plays Tuesday to Saturday evenings, 8 p.m., through August 31 with a matinee on September 1. Tickets ($28-30) are available at the Guild Hall box office (631-324-4050), online at www.guildhall.org, or from Theatermania (866-811-4111 or www.theatermania.com).

Dan's Papers Best of the Best Summer 2007 Memories

Whether they were writing an article, covering an event, or simply having fun with their friends and family, the staff at Dan's Papers has definitely had a long, action-packed, summer of 2007.

For many of the staff at Dan's Papers, attending some of the Hampton's most spectacular events, parties, and luxuries were the highlights of the summer. Intern Fred Katz's best memory of the summer was receiving a free meal at The Lodge in East Hampton. Janine Cheviot, Assistant Editor, and Elizabeth Cheviot, Graphic Designer, were both entertained at Sir Ivan's Superhero Party at his mansion in Watermill, while Joel Rodney, Graphic Designer, had fun at the Date-Hampton party at Turtlebay. Eileen Dermody, Assistant to Sales Director, enjoyed sipping "pear martinis from my going away party at Pierre's Restaurant." Lisa Delisi, Display Sales Executive, also had fun at the going away party, describing it as "delightful." Another festivity of this summer was the Launch Party with Top Chef Eric Ripert, which Kathy Rae, Associate Publisher and Advertising Sales Director, not only attended, but also labeled as her favorite memory of these last few months. Joan Gray, Assistant to the Publisher, remembers "the Potato Hampton on Memorial Day. It was a wonderfully successful event." Display Sales Executive, Annemarie Davin, attended the Stevie Nicks concert at Jones Beach this summer and Victoria Cooper, Coordinating Editor, enjoyed "meeting Kid Rock and shaking hands with Prince...owww!" Sabrina Mashburn, Features Editor, says "my favorite moment of this summer was going to opening day at the Mercedes-Benz Polo Tournament" and Intern Jaime Felber's top memory of the summer was attending the White Trash Party where "T.J. (a writer for Dan's Papers) looked like he was a throwback from the '70s."

Because the weather was nearly perfect these last few months, David Lion Rattiner, Web Editor/Associate Editor, Genevieve Salamone, Production Assistant, Catherine Ellams, Display Sales Executive, and Kim Vega, Sales Executive, all enjoyed boating and spending time in the outdoors this summer. Rattiner went "sailing from Sag Harbor to East Hampton" and then "saw Turandot at Bay Street Theatre and ate ice cream afterwards." Rattiner also mentioned his encounter with Billy Joel where he screamed "at the top of my lungs all of the lyrics to the song, 'We Didn't Start the Fire.'" Salamone spent time "boating with my family every weekend," while Ellams says "we took our boat from Wooly Pond over to Cutchogue and dropped anchor and swam in perfect conditions-perfect waves, temperature, and no jellies." Web Specialist, Matt Cross's favorite memory of the summer was, ironically, "the 4th of July fireworks," although it most certainly rained that night...

Many of the staff's most positive memories of the summer included spending time with family and friends. Nicole Caruso, Production Director, remembers taking her new puppy, Allie, swimming and Jim Best, Accounts Receivable, enjoyed "Sundays at Browns Beach in Northfork-family time." ToniAnn Esposito says her favorite memory of the summer was "spending time with my colleagues at Dan's Papers" and Jean Lynch, Display Sales Executive, recalls "when Tim, the intern got lost going to Bobby Vans and then again on his way to 75 Main." Display Sales Executive, Tom Ratcliffe III had the most memorable part of his summer on "Father's Day- I had a baby." Maritza Smith, Display Sales Executive, also remembers when Ratcliffe's baby was born. Her favorite memory of the summer was "when Tom Ratcliffe's new born baby, little Tommy, was brought by his wife to the office. He was three days old and he was so cute!" Ellen Dioguardi, Assistant to the Associate Publisher, labels her best moment of the summer as "a tough call. It's between getting married at Atlantica in Westhampton Beach-the most perfect day and starting my new job at Dan's." Christina Okula, Office Manager, says "having the interns was a big help this summer but the best memory was Lewis's (Dan's Papers' receptionist) antics in the front office." Receptionist Louis DiPasquale's favorite memory of the summer was "mooning my boss at a company party the second day of working at Dan's." He also had fun singing to Display Sales Executive, Maritza Smith in the front office and seeing the Simpson's movie with character, Spiderpig, also known as Harry Plopper. Kelly Merritt, Art Director, enjoyed "going to Six Flags and riding Kingda Ka," while Emily Esposito, an Intern, says her favorite memory of the summer was "working at the Candy Kitchen, making strawberry-coconut milkshakes for dinner and getting a free t-shirt."

Tom Swinimer, Distribution Manager, is looking forward to Labor Day, saying "I dream about this day from Memorial Day on...the traffic is gone because summer is over," and Display Sales Executive Jim Smith's favorite memory of the summer was "not talking to Maritza Smith (Display Sales Executive for Dan's Papers) for 30 days!"

As for me, my top moment of the summer was staying at the University of Michigan for three weeks although I am not quite sure that is even comparable with Michael Cross's fireworks or seeing Harry Potter on the big screen...

This has definitely been a summer to remember.

Stardust

A mallet pounding on a head! A stomach aflame! A demon stabbing someone's back! They're not from last week's movies. Nay, they're old time, black and white TV commercials like the one that asked, Do you suffer from tired blood?, then pushed a spurious remedy, "SERUTAN" (Nature's, spelled backwards. Honest). Well, today I ask, "Do you suffer from TMS, Tired Movie Syndrome?" You do. Then have I got a movie for you – Stardust. Spelled backwards it makes about as much sense as the movie itself – a light-hearted, romantic fantasy of nonsense but, gee, does it make you feel good! Placebo or not, it works. Like those commercials, I can go on to ask, "Have you been overly, lorded-over by the Lord of the Rings extravaganzas or sold too much Harry Pottery, touted to be of Ming Dynasty value?" If so, Stardust, without making demands of you, also has storybook magic.

Witches and spell casting abound, as do Peter O'Toole, Robert DeNiro, Ricky Gervais and, after a 5 year sojourn, Michelle Pfeiffer returns to the big screen with bristling-spikey performances in Hairspray and Stardust, sprinkling a lot of it along the way. Raging with Cruella de Vil fever, Ms. Pfeiffer at 49 years of age, takes witchery to new broomstick heights. Both sultry and sneering, she is the antagonist, Lamia, a 400-year-old crone (when in withering makeup) who needs a fresh pulsating heart to restore her youth (Serutan or Geritol not yet developed). The restorative heart arrives to fantastic land Stormhold as a shooting star that turns into a halo-glowing beauty, Yvaine, played uncomfortably by Claire Danes who persistently looks constipated. The falling star has a mystical ruby whose powers can give the sons of the dying Lord (O'Toole) the keys to the kingdom. It's a difficult task for them since the witches and everyone else want it. Soon, they are toast, mere B&W ghosts while, the romantic hero, Tristan, played by an Orlando Bloom'ish, Charlie Cox sallies forth to impress the local good looker, Victoria (Sienna Miller). She is a cold object of desire but he thinks his hot adolescent drive will defrost her if he can get her the "Ruby!"

The narrative for Stardust lingers for a while in Byzantine byways. Oh, there's a unicorn. Uh oh, another magical spell. Sorceress waves a wand, bam! He's a mouse. Soon, however, an irreverent Gen Y attitude skews the genre's formula and you think it is A Princess Bride revisited. It's there all right but Stardust is a different kettle of witches brew. Look closely and there's a subtle sexual political subplot of deft whimsy as four older women are the villains and the young protagonist is aided by his alien gal pal who has a lot of moxie. Also, assisting him is gay Captain Shakespeare. Your timbers will be shivered when you are accosted by Robert DeNiro as the cross dressing pirate. I think he took the term "fairy tale" too literally. He's a mincing buccaneer with a galleon flying in the air, similar to a Jules Verne contraption that is much less fanciful than its farcical pirate captain. He likes to dance the cancan to Offenbach's music, kicking high and raising his skirts to reveal his panties. Ooo la lah, I still don't know what to think of his audacious performance and if it was fortuitous for Tristan and Yvaine to land on his ship after being rocketed into the air.

The falling star Yvaine is gradually falling in love with Tristan but her irritability (remember?) keeps her from realizing it and she refuses to be an engagement present for the vain Victoria. Wouldn't you? I just wish Ms. Danes, as the spirit-charmed Yvaine, could have registered a bit of charm in the midst of this stupendous gamut of adventures – the chases, the sword-fights, royal intrigue, plot twists as screwy and screwed up as its players. The graphic novel's author from which the story stems, Neil Gaiman, may also get lost in the enhancement by its director Matthew Vaughn and co-writer Jane Goldman, but simply lie back in your seat and let the stardust sail over you like pixie pink cotton candy. Sticky or not, it works hard to entertain you with its impressive amount of "stuff" – good, bad, indifferent, handsome, ugly, rich, gaudy, funny, sad, etc. Choose one or two, there's bound to be one to your liking. If not, you can go with the crowd to other movies. Stardust the movie does not have the appeal Hoagy Carmichael's Stardust has had as the most played popular song ever written. Maybe movie buffs are too loyal to A Princess Bride. I dunno.

Mike Vilensky's MINI – MOVIE REVIEWS

Mr. Bean's Holiday

Who knew Mr. Bean was still making movies? In this installment of the silly series, the bumbling American wins a free trip to the chic South of France where his video diary ends up at the Cannes Film Festival. Rowan Atikinson, who plays Bean, claims that this will be the last of the Mr. Bean movies, and it just might be the funniest in years.

War

Jet Li stars in this action thriller about an FBI agent seeking to avenge the death of his partner. If there is anything new that can be added to the East Asian ass-kicking for vengeance genre, this movie doesn't bring it. Just watch Kill Bill again.

Illegal Tender

A young Latino flees home to avenge the murder of his father and avoid the same fate. Aided by his mother, the boy's journey has him uncover some family secrets and end up in - Southampton. No, actually Puerto Rico, but my version is better.

The Nanny Diaries

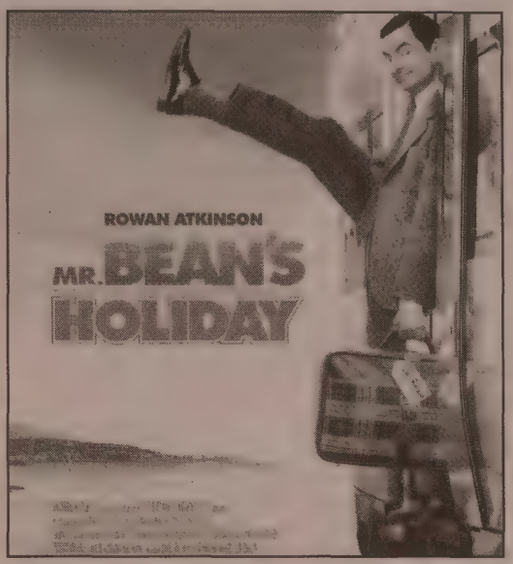
Scarlett Johansen stars as an NYU student paying her education bills through a slightly less seedy livelihood than prostitution: babysitting city brats. Directed, oddly enough, by the "American Splendor" team, this modern, funny chick-lit adaptation could be this summer's Devil Wears Prada, which isn't such a bad film fate.

Dans Paris

No, not Dan's Papers, Dans Paris, which means "Inside Paris," where some of this French art house movie takes place. A heavy and heartbroken thirtysomething returns to his family's flat to mourn the loss of his girlfriend, while his hip carefree twentysomething brother beds a whole bunch of Parisian girlfriends. Despite all the flashy French New Wave references and techniques, this worthwhile film has a surprising amount of heart and a deep respect for family.

Closing Escrow

Many a Hamptonite will relate and laugh along with this mockumentary about the most ruthless and die-hard modern American occupation: the real estate agent. The bidding wars between three quirky families test marriages and the resolve of their agents, in ways only an East Ender might understand.



The 11th Hour

Does it make me a better person if I keep mentioning all of the environment – themed documentaries in theatres? It sort of makes me feel like one, so it will probably sort of make you feel like one as well if you go see this documentary, which I commend for not only explaining the problems caused by global warming but for also mentioning the possible solutions. "Green" celebrity Leonardo Dicaprio narrates, which is cooler than Al Gore, I guess. But the planet is (arguably) worth saving, so this informative documentary is definitely worth watching.

Silvia Lehrer's Cooking Column

While domestic peach crops have been available for several months they will never match the best summer varieties. Our local peach crop is at the peak of their pleasure with farm-ripened peaches available at our local orchards.

A favorite late summer dessert, of several of my students, is the rustic, free-form galette lined with concentric circles of a seasonal fruit. This versatile tart can also be made with apples and plums in season as well. For now fresh summer peaches dripping with juice, is a wonderful choice. While students have easily prepared a classic pate brisee pastry in cooking class for the galette, commercial frozen puff pastry eliminates the step of preparing the pastry. And in summer this is a helpful choice.

Peaches and blueberries make an equally delectable summer dessert and a change from the usual cobblers and streusels. Just slice and bake with a wine sugar syrup and the addition of blueberries. Then with your overrun of peaches a chilled peach cooler makes a refreshing and delicious smoothie.

When selecting peaches the flesh should yield slightly to pressure, be free of blemishes with a whitish or creamy color surrounding a rosy blush.

PEACH GALETTE WITH PUFF PASTRY

Get out the pizza cutter for this delectable summer dessert.

Serves 8-10

1 sheet frozen puff pastry, defrosted

For the topping
2 pounds ripe peaches
1/4 cup sugar
3 tablespoons unsalted butter

The glaze
5-6 tablespoons apricot jam
2 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon peach brandy or orange liqueur

1. Roll the puff pastry about 1/8-inch thick to approximate the size or a little larger than you baking sheet. Roll up on your pin and unroll directly on the sheet. Prick dough with a fork and put in the refrigerator to chill for 30 minutes or longer

2. Rinse and dry peaches and cut into 1/4-inch slices. Arrange sliced in concentric circles starting at the outer rim of the dough approximately 1 to 1 1/2-inches from the border. Pleat the dough around the fruit gently sealing the overlapping fold with a damp pastry brush. Sprinkle fruit with sugar and dot with butter. Place in preheated oven and bake for 45-50 minutes or until pastry is golden brown and peaches are juicy and tender.

3. About 15 minutes before the galette is done warm the apricot jam with water in a small saucepan. Stir to break up the jam and simmer until mixture is a bit smooth. Remove from heat and stir in the brandy. Spoon the glaze all over the peaches. Cut into wedges for serving and enjoy.

PEACH AND BLUEBERRY BAKE

Blessed with an abundance of peaches and blueberries, my friend Shirley Van Winkle came up with this simple but sophisticated treat.

Serves 6

2/3 cup sugar
1/2 cup dry white wine (plus extra for the cook)
1/4 cup cold water
2-3 strips orange jest
1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
6 large ripe but firm peaches
1 cup blueberries
Vanilla ice cream or frozen yogurt

Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

1. Put the sugar, wine, water and zest in a saucepan and bring to the edge of a boil. Adjust heat to a brisk simmer and cook for 5-6 minutes until syrupy. Remove from heat and stir in the vanilla.

2. Rinse peaches and pat dry with paper towel. Halve, pit and quarter the peaches and arrange cut side up, one layer deep, in an attractive baking/serving dish. Pour over syrup and bake for 30-40 minutes according to ripeness of peaches. Baste with pan juices at least 2 – 3 times during baking. About ten minutes before peaches are done, scatter over the blueberries. Test peaches for doneness with the tip of a knife. Serve warm with a scoop of ice cream or yogurt.

CHILLED PEACH COOLER

A "smoothie" or "cooler" is a light version of that American classic, the milkshake.

Yield 3 servings

2 cups cold skim milk
1 cup fresh sliced peaches
2 tablespoons frozen orange juice concentrate
2 tablespoons honey
Fresh mint sprigs for garnish

1. Place all the ingredients in a blender container and cover. Blend on high speed until smooth and frothy. Chill if doing ahead. Pour into tall glasses and serve immediately. Garnish with mint sprigs.

Dining in the Hamptons

Before the Bridge

78 Foster Avenue
Hampton Bays, NY
631-728-9111

Located right by the water in Hampton Bays is a local restaurant with a truly exceptional menu. Before the Bridge combines stunningly delicious food with a charming local flair in a restaurant that stays true to itself and that keeps diners coming back again and again.

Owned by husband and wife team Marty and Patti Robinson, who have 30 years in the restaurant business, Before the Bridge hits the mark in style, charm and above all, food. You can tell that Marty and Patti take the food in their restaurant very seriously when you look at the simply jaw dropping menu of creative and well priced dishes.

Our waitress Beth, who was not just knowledgeable of the food and restaurant but also treated us like family, gave us our menus and extensive wine list. We ordered the Pinot Noir, St. Angeline 2005 Sonoma, clicked our glasses and gave a sip. Perfect. I'm not a wine guy, but I know when I have tasted a wine I like and I highly recommend ordering a bottle of this superb Pinot. It is fabulous.

Executive chef Cory Schorsch, who has had a life experience in cooking since he was 15 years old, does not let the Robinson's down, who he calls, "His biggest critic." With fish and seafood as fresh as you can possibly get (directly from the waters off of Hampton Bays) from Cor-J's, I had fish on my mind, although the Sunday night Sand Dune Special caught my eye. Four courses for just $24.95 of a delicious appetizer of steak bites, a dinner salad and a 1/2 lobster, 6 shrimp, steamed clams and mussels served with rice pilaf and vegetables is an unbelievable bargain. This, of course, included a dessert. "We sell an unbelievable amount of lobster," Marty tells me. This dish was being ordered by many of the diners seated inside the oak and mahogany styled restaurant.

As an appetizer I tried seared scallops, which was served with a citrus thyme sauce that was excellent. The four scallops were as fresh as they possibly could be, but I couldn't help but try my guest's shrimp seared with black sesame seeds served with roasted corn salsa that was unique, delicious and interesting.

Enjoying the handmade breads and pastries in between our appetizer and entrée, we learned that Patti is in charge of all the pastries at the restaurant and that people have been requesting that she sell her creations to go.

Our entrées that came out were sensational. My guest had the fried soft shell crabs with saffron aioli served with rice pilaf and corn. This will make any soft shell crab lover very happy. I had the chef's suggestion of roasted local striped bass with a cornbread herb crust served with rice pilaf and sautéed squash. The cornbread herb crust made the dish wonderfully flaky and the portion size of this dish is more then generous.

Without hesitation, we ordered dessert knowing that we would be in the owners hands when it came to excellent dessert because she hand makes everything herself. We were amazed at the Bailey's Irish Crèème cheesecake that nearly had me falling out of my chair it was so delicious. The fresh made peach cobbler also didn't last very long at the table as each of us were laughing about how fantastic it was.

By the end of the meal, the two of us were more than satisfied and we left knowing that we had discovered a gem in Hampton Bays. Before The Bridge has nightly specials and is open year round six nights a week. They also have a catering business and will be doing daily prixe fixe specials starting in mid-September. Appetizers are from $6.95 to $19.95, entrees are from $19.95 to $35.95. *Reservations are recommended by calling (631) 728-9111. Dining in the Hamptons

The Best Sunday Night Dinner You've Never Had

Last Sunday night, despite the rain, my father decided to treat my brother, mother and I to one of our favorite meals – his famous, grilled littleneck clams. Coupled with my sweet potato fries and grilled corn and my mother's mandarin orange salad, this was my favorite meal of the summer.

I am not sure how our family clam recipe came about, but ever since I was too short to see what was on top of the grill, I have looked forward to devouring as many of these tasty morsels as I could get my hands on. This year, I decided to pay close attention to how my father makes these delicious mollusks, so I can replicate them myself whenever I am feeling nostalgic for these lazy summer Sundays.

Shopping for this dinner was easy. As I did my weekend errands around the Hamptons, I picked up a fresh rosemary and olive loaf from Breadzilla in Wainscott, sweet potatoes from Pike's farm stand in Sagaponack and some corn from Dean's farm stand in Westhampton Beach. Meanwhile, my mother baught five-dozen littleneck clams from Star Bogg's in Westahmpton, extra virgin olive oil and Italian salad dressing from La Parmigiana in Southampton and sliced mandarin oranges, roasted almonds and spring mix salad from Wild by Nature in Hampton Bays. After picking up a Pedro Almodovar movie, we were ready for a night of cooking, feasting and relaxation.

Preparing dinner was a family affair, so the entire meal took only an hour to get from shoppign bags to our plates. While my little brother set the table and washed the lettuce, my father and I set to work on the clams.

First, I chopped up an entire head of fresh garlic and a handful of fresh parsley and mixed them together in a small saucepan, along with a generous layer of extra-virgin olive oil. When the weather is nice, my father usually puts the saucepan directly on the grill to soften up the garlic and flavor the oil. But because no one wanted to stand out in the rain to make sure that the garlic didn't turn brown, we heated this batch on the stove at low heat.

While the sauce was warming, I put the fresh corn, which had been soaking in water and sea salt all day, on the grill. Since the grill had been heating for a while, it didn't take long before the husks were evenly browned and the sweet corn was ready to eat.

Once the corn was done, my father placed the clams on the grill one by one and closed the top. "You need to keep the top closed in order to get the clam shells to open up," my father explained. When the clams were open, my father spooned a heaping portion of the garlic and oil mixture onto each clam.

At this point, I went back inside to crisp the bread and whip up some sweet potato fries. I had washed and cut the potatoes on Saturday and left them soaking in saltwater overnight, so as to draw the natural sugars out and ensure that the fries would be crispy on the outside and moist and fluffy in the middle. Following Emeril Lagasse's recipe, I heated some canola oil in a large saucepan on medium-low heat until it reached 300 degrees, then turned it up to medium-high as I added the fries.

Meanwhile, my mother was busy making the bread and salad. After my brother had sliced the bread into thick slices, my mother drizzled them with olive oil and put them in the oven on broil to crisp them up. For the salad, she chopped a handful of olives and threw them over a big bowl of baby spring lettuces, then tossed in the La Parmigiana dressing and mandarin oranges.

By the time the fries turned bright orange, the bread was crispy and the salad dressed. Just then, my father appeared with a huge tray of perfect , sizzling clams. Each clamshell had golden-brown edges and the garlic inside had the faintest hint of brown and a pungent, delicious scent. As we built our plates and took our places around the kitchen table, "oohs," "aahs" and "mmms" were all we could manage to utter while enjoying the fruits of each other's labor.

Nothing tastes quite as good as a family meal prepared by the people you love most, especially one as fresh and flavorful as this. Enjoy.

Arts & Galleries

ART COMMENTARY With Marion Wolberg Weiss

CONCEPTUAL ART: STEVE SOREFF
Part II

While Steve Soreff's work is not currently in a commercial gallery, his East Hampton home is a virtual substitute: walls, tabletops, floors and bathrooms overflow with his work. And all of it are fine examples of conceptual art. One may even suggest that Mr. Soreff's residence / art works are, in fact, an installation.

More salient, perhaps, is what determines conceptual art in the case of this particular artist. First, there's the idea of combining incongruent images / objects, a surrealistic trait that we pointed out in last week's Art Commentary.

Mr. Soreff's found objects, which he collects at will and often saves for years, is an interesting subject in itself; his sources include an African trinket shop, a Chinese department store, a Ninth Avenue hardware venue and even the local dump.

Consider the following incongruencies: religious icons (Russian dolls) held with wooden clamps; a string of pearls wrapped around a rubber snake; a toy trumpet embedded in artificial lillies and leaves.

So what's it all about?

Incongruencies are a prime element in conceptual art, often the vehicle for conveying a theme or message. We could even explain such contradictions in terms of the following well-known political/philosophical principle: thesis plus antithesis equals synthesis. Commenting on this idea, Mr. Soreff suggested that his works may even evoke multiple meanings inherent in the synthesis (the combination of different / opposing parts to make a separate concept).

Russian Icons

The Russian icons serve as a good example of Mr. Soreff's artistic goals. Obviously, the clamps function to restrict the figures, inferring that religion is "tied down" or hampered. Another piece conveys the same idea: a handcuffed series of hands attached to a cross-like configuration made of whips.

Mr. Soreff's themes also include anti-war statements: a small man chained to a toy tank; a stethoscope attached to a gas mask (conveying the idea of war as a disease).

Since there are consistencies in Mr. Soreff's work, like the use of violent instruments (handcuffs, whips, gas mask), we may also relate his meanings to sado-masochism, although this is not what he has in mind.

What Mr. Soreff may have in mind is often spontaneous and unconscious. Perfect for capturing the spirit of conceptual art.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CASEY CHALEM ANDERSON

No matter how hard you may try, you can't escape Casy Chalem Anderson's spirit and positive attitude about life. Even over the phone, this week's cover artist is a model of life-affirming thoughts and feelings, a person we wished could generate more individuals like herself to populate the planet. Her cover image, "Immense Cloud," reinforces Ms. Anderson's world-view.

Q: When I first met you, several years ago, you were painting portraits. One you had painted of your son, Brian, was on Dan's cover. People still remember that. And as you watched your son grow up (as I did, too) we also saw your paintings mature. Now, you primarily do landscapes. Why is that?

A: As a child growing up in New York, I was always attracted to the sea. We'd always go to Provincetown in the summers. I just went to Wellesley, Massachusetts, to see my son, who's in college there, and it brought back such wonderful memories of being on the water, being free – and that was 30 years ago.

Q: And here you are in Sag Harbor, still on the water, surrounded by the land you love.

A: Yes, I have a strong connection to nature.

Q: Why else are you attracted to nature and the sea?

A: I feel calm and tranquil looking at the landscape – I want to translate those feelings to the viewer through my art. I feel safe here, on the flat, horizontal land. The eye can survey the landscape with one swoop.

Q: How about your ability to explore things and find new places to paint?

A: I'm so filled up with this place. There's so much to discover, like Acabonac Harbor, Shelter Island and Amagansett.

Q: How about why you like it here in terms of your aesthetics?

A: Here, there are more variations of color coming from the changing seasons and weather. The moisture level effects the light, too. Every day is different.

Q: I can see why there are so many reasons you love this place. How did you find Sag Harbor? You were in California, going to school, before you moved here, right?

A: Yes. I would come to visit friends who lived here year-round. I was awe-struck by the sea when I came here. It gave me inspiration. I knew this place was home.

Q: Do you find painting relaxing? There's so much to get stressed out about here, especially in the summer with all the traffic.

A: Painting does make me slow down. I find painting both stimulating and comforting. It nourishes me, motivates me to make something that never was.

Q: Although the creative process comforts you, you are also focusing on a new format.

A: Yes, I'm working on a new format, the square. I am layering my color also, which is more complex. The use of color is both transparent and opaque. It's like looking through colored glass to the color beneath.

Q: Any last thoughts on living here, near the water?

A: It informs my work, of course, but it would be torture if I didn't live here.

"Three Women," Two Mediums, One Show

Three Women, a show of paintings at Wish Rock Studio on Shelter Island, features the work of three longtime Islanders who divide their time between here and Brooklyn, upstate New York and Massachusetts, respectively. All have paintings in private collections across the country and are strongly influenced by the natural world. Two work in watercolors and the third in both watercolors and oils, but the three appear to share a common goal – to capture natural light and interpret it on canvas or paper.

"Watercolor is tricky because the lights on the paper must be preserved throughout the painting process, whereas in oil they can be added on at any time," said Olive Reich, a watercolorist who feels the medium allows a "glow [to] move through" her paintings. This is particularly evident in "Light Play," a realistic still life of flowers and a small blue and white bowl of peaches on a patchwork quilt that beautifully evokes through the artist's use of light, a languorous summer afternoon in a country house. Quite a different effect is achieved in "Breaking Waves," a semi-abstract seascape that captures waves suspended above a rocky coast. Here, tension is created as the waves loom over the sand, but at the same time the artist manages to make them appear luminous. Ms. Reich's work does indeed appear to be lit from within.

"Flagpole at Sundown, Shelter Island"

"Light Play"

Phyllis Tarlow works in both oils and watercolors, and is also very influenced by light. "I'm very drawn to the way light hits a subject and suddenly dramatizes it," said the artist. "That can make the difference between wanting to paint a scene and passing right by it." Ms. Tarlow is drawn to, and adept at, capturing dramatic skies, as evidenced by "Storm Clearing," a small oil sketch of dark clouds in a Hudson Highlands evening sky, and "Flagpole at Sundown, Shelter Island," which captures one of those sunsets and is so intense that it appears to be on fire. Ms. Tarlow's less dramatic work is equally successful. "Shoreline Path," a scene of a dirt walkway and fence disappearing over a hill as it winds toward the water on Cape Cod, invites the viewer to discover where it leads.

Sally Bevilacqua is a watercolorist inspired by both the architecture in Shelter Island Heights as well as the seaside near her home in Scituate Harbor, Massachusetts. "North Fork Sunflowers," a close-up of a field of sunflowers with a small barn in the distance, is particularly striking with its use of shadow against the white barn. "This painting was inspired by the profusion of flowers and play of light and color against the sky," says the artist. A lovely small sketch, "Porch Flag," depicts an American flag hanging from the eave of a blue Heights Victorian. An interesting and very appealing departure from the artist's realistic style is "Charlie III," an impressionistic interpretation of fishing boats that features a riot of color. Ms. Bevilacqua veered from her usual style to achieve not only "intense color" but also "the vibrancy of a crisp New England day" using "loose brushstrokes."

Three Women runs through Sunday, August 26. Wish Rock Studio is located in Shelter Island Heights next to the pharmacy. Open 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. The gallery, owned by Sandra and Peter Waldner, a syndicated cartoonist, offers full service custom matting and framing. Call (631) 749-5200 for more information.

Holistic Health in the Hamptons

We are constantly looking for something new and different to experience in holistic health care. Do you remember Tangee? That was the closest lip product to holistic and all the rage in the fifties. Now there is something new, different and unique that is exclusive at Naturopathica Spa called R26 Mineral Lip Tints.

The typical American woman will ingest an alarming four to nine pounds of lipstick in her lifetime. The toxic chemicals found in most lip colors are then deposited in to the liver and kidneys. While one might expect chemical compounds in mainstream and department store cosmetics, it is surprising that products found in the Naturals Market contain the exact same harmful ingredients while claiming to be safe and natural. For example, most lip glosses contain synthetic copolymers and an ammonium salt, both of which can lead to allergic reactions and skin sensitivity. Almost all glosses contain polybutene, a petroleum-derived glue that can lead to skin sensitivity.

Naturopathica's Mineral Lip Tints were designed by experienced color artist and accomplished painter, Kristie Keheley of Taos, New Mexico. Each individual color has great depth and is modeled after the range of colors found in prestige brands. Typically, natural cosmetic competitors have more simplistic colors. All of the pigments are 100% mineral, not synthetic and not animal derived. Mineral pigment cosmetics have exploded in popularity and sales in recent years.

As for safety, healthy cosmetic choices are long overdue. The Mineral Lip Tints are made with only the purest food grade ingredients, mineral pigments and safe preservative systems. They are designed to be skin conditioning and protective. Rarely are cosmetics found in such edible, nontoxic bases.

Naturopathica Ingredients Glossary:

Beeswax – anti-inflammatory, anti-allergenic, anti-oxidant, anti-bacterial, germicidal and skin softening. Its emulsifier helps lock in the skin's own natural moisture and creates a protective, long lasting barrier against elements as opposed to petroleum waxes, which strip skin of its natural moisture.

Castor Oil – Humectant and skin conditioning, creates a protective barrier against the elements. It has excellent stability and dispersion characteristics.

Coconut Oil – Deeply penetrating moisturizer and anti-oxidant. Skin moisturizing delivery system, carries the benefits of other ingredients into the skin. Good for dry, itchy, sensitive skin and it doesn't clog pores.

Titanium Dioxide – (TiO2) is a naturally occurring compound which is mined and the choice for sun block because it is more cosmetically pleasing than zinc oxide. It is both a UVA and UVB protectant (protects against skin cancer and wrinkling due to sun exposure). It is also used for cosmetic reasons.

Kokum Butter – helps regenerate skin cells, supports skin elasticity and general flexibility of the skin wall. It has been used traditionally in India to soften skin and restore elasticity. Kokum butter is rich in essential fatty acids (EFAs), which aid in cell oxygenation and make vitamins and minerals more available to tissues.

Natural Fruit Extracts – highest quality 100% natural fruit and plant extracts used as flavoring. Tocopherol (Natural Vitamin E) is made from vegetable sources and is a major anti-oxidant nutrient that retards cellular aging due to oxidation. It repairs and prevents damage to the skin and is excellent for cuts and scars.

Lysine – An essential amino acid, anti-viral, effective in treating cold sores, imparts a silky texture. It is derived from molasses.

Naturopathica Holistic Health is much more than a product line. They are a destination point for embracing the pure essentials of well-being. Whether your focus is on maintaining vibrant and radiant skin, alleviating or preventing ailments or seeking optimal health through natural therapies, they offer result-oriented solutions that can be easily integrated into your lifestyle.

The Hampton Classic, Part 3. The Jumper Ring

Ladies and gentlemen, boys and girls, this is it! The two-week equestrian extravaganza we all look forward to each year is finally here. The tents are up, the stalls are built and the Beval truck is about to roll into town. When the first buzzer sounds on Sunday at 1 p.m., resounding through the Grand Prix field and sending its first talented beast towards fame or failure, we will all hold our collective breath to see which horse and rider teams will reign as champions.

Although there will be equine athletes in every arena at the Classic, in the world of the Hunter/Jumper show, only a Jumper class can award its champions $150,000 for a clean round and sell hundreds of VIP tables each day. But, why?

First off, the Jumper classes are the only true, unbiased tests of talent and skill at the show. Jumpers may be of any breed, height or sex and judges in the jumper ring cannot award points for style, or deduct them if the rider loses his or her stirrups. Jumper riders race against the clock, charging from buzzer to finish line as fast as their horses will carry them, all the while using their impeccable riding skills and quick thinking to approach each fence in a way that saves time but also ensures that their mount will not knock down the rails.

Because Jumper classes are the only classes required to award prize money, the stakes – and the jumps – are higher and wider than at any other classes at the show. Although ponies, children and amateurs can compete in classes with fences as low as 2'9"-3', all professional Jumper classes are 1.40m (4'6") or higher. And unlike a Hunter or Equitation class, there must be a certain number of spreads – obstacles that are two to twelve feet wider than they are high. In a Grand Prix class, where the fences can be up to 5' high at the outset and raised even higher for the jump-off, the spreads are formidable and the risk of a horse and rider team falling through the fence is great.

The point system upon which the Jumper classes are scored is complex, but once you know the basics, it is easy to judge who the winner will be even before the results are announced. The only way for a horse and rider with a clean trip (no obstacles knocked down or refused) to fall out of the running is to go over the Time Allowed. That time is judged by how long it would take a horse to complete the course while traveling at a speed of 382 yards-per-minute. The timer starts as soon as the horse's chest crosses the starting line or 45 seconds after the buzzer has sounded – in the big money classes, the time remaining must be displayed, making the rounds even more nerve-wracking as the crowd watches the time slipping awaysecond by second. Each second a horse and rider spend on course past the Time Allowed will cost them one fault. In the most competitive classes, five seconds in the ring after a clean round means elimination.

Timing is not the only thing Jumpers need to worry about. If a horse stops in front of an obstacle and takes a step backward, it is considered a refusal and four faults are incurred. The second disobedience – halting, running past an obstacle, or taking a circle before approaching a fence – results in elimination. If a horse dislodges any part of an obstacle, four faults are given. And if a horse and rider jump an obstacle that was not part of the original course, they are eliminated from competition and charged a $250 fine.

With such detailed rules, Jumper horses and their riders must be the most precise, focused and careful exhibitors at the Classic. One misstep could put them out of the game, into the hospital, or worse. To win a champion ribbon, they must push themselves to their physical and mental limits.

To watch world's finest equestrians test their abilities on the Hampton Classic's famously difficult courses, be sure to catch the $20,000 Nicolock Open Jumper Time Challenge on August 26, the $50,000 Grey Goose Vodka World Cup/Grand Prix Qualifier on August 31, the $25,000 Sotheby's International Realty Challenge on September 1 and the $150,000 FTI Grand Prix on September 2.

See you at the show!

Matchmaker, Matchmaker, Make Me a Match!

The Hamptons have always been the place where many people vacation because of the oceanfront beauty and reputation as the "place to be."

So, this summer, you rented a house share because there are lots of singles like yourself who live in the New York City and take a Jitney from Manhattan to the East End for weekend getaways and breaks from work.

You know you have everything it takes to meet a successful single partner. You dieted and exercised all spring to fit into a sexy bikini, you found a great house to rent with good roommates who like to party, you researched where the best singles bars and nightlife are and you made it a point to visit them all. But, Mr. Right hasn't shown up. How can you be single in the summer in the Hamptons?

Finding your soul mate is not an easy task, so don't feel so bad. It requires time and patience. You may have been attracted to a lot of men in the Hamptons at first, but you quickly learn they're not what you're looking for and they don't want a commitment. You become frustrated because you planted yourself in the right place, only to find that every other girl is doing the same thing and the competition is fierce.

The good news is, you are not alone in your search for love. There are people who can help you find a wonderful life partner who is worth the wait.

Instead of resorting to bars, socialization groups and online dating, the traditional art of matchmaking is making a return and is fast becoming a trend among successful professional singles across the country and the tri-state area. Matchmaking represents the traditional method used by our parents and grandparents of bringing two kindred spirits together.

Matchmaking is offline dating that utilizes the talents of a professional matchmaker who is committed to helping singles find their special someone. They do so by spending a lot of time getting to know each person who seeks their help, like a trusted a friend would.

The key to successfully matching two people together is a real understanding of their personalities, desires and passions, according to Dawn Tefel, a Long Island matchmaker.

"It's important to get to know people on a personal level because everyone is different and they all want different types of people and are expecting different things from a relationship."

Dawn hand selects all her matches and that's why she is often referred to as the "Personal Shopper for the Heart."

Matchmaking doesn't involve taking compatibility tests or creating your own version of a customized video profile. The service is confidential and discreet. Matchmakers meet with their clients privately to get to know them so they can access their personalities and learn about their interests, hobbies, values and past relationships. The goal of the matchmaker is to find suitable matches based on the characteristics each client is seeking in a partner.

All matches are hand selected once a determination is made for a match. The matchmaker will speak to both clients about the potential introduction and if they agree, the matchmaker will arrange the time and place of the date and will even make a restaurant reservation, if need be.

After the date is over, the matchmaker will follow up within 24 hours, since finding out how the date went, down to every detail, including what was discussed is very important. Matchmakers like Dawn will usually begin the follow-up by asking whether there is chemistry, since it's a major component of a successful match.

"If there is chemistry and their personalities and interests are compatible, they will most likely exchange information and see each other again."

Those who try matchmaking are often beyond dating for the sake of dating. Many are divorced and have been out of the dating scene for a while and don't know how or where to go about finding a mate. They also are unfamiliar with the ever-changing rules of dating. Generally, people who seek a matchmaker's help are serious about committing to happiness and a fulfilling life. They look upon the use of a matchmaker as an investment in their future and they're willing to take the time and effort to make it work.

Don't despair if you're still single in the Hamptons. There is someone out there for everyone and a matchmaker can help you discover them sooner than you think.

Great Date Now is the largest personalized matchmaking service for successful single professionals in the tri-state area. E-mail dawn@greatdatenow.comor visit their Web site at www.greatdatenow.com.

The Running Man

One of the perks of working just a few blocks from one of the most beautiful coastlines in the world is the occasional beach run break. Day was becoming dusk at the mysterious Dan's Papers office when famed "Twentysomething" writer David Lion Rattiner suggested such a break. I hadn't expected the offer – certainly not at the evening hour during which he brought it up – but I found it hard to resist quality exercise in lieu of office air conditioning on such a pleasant eve. Still, I had my reservations – my exercise usually consists of street running, pool swimming and personal training sessions at GymHampton – a makeshift sort of athleticism, not the rugged outdoors of the beach.

"I don't have shoes," I said, looking down at my blue Sperry Topsiders.

"You don't need them, we're running on the sand."

I hesitated. I was pretty pleased with how I looked that day – Hamptons chic, I must say, in a Ralph Lauren oxford and vintage-looking (and overpriced) khaki shorts that the saleswoman at the Greenwich Village Marc Jacobs had talked me into.

"The sand? I usually run along the beach, but on route 27! The sand is tough."

"We'll run where it's wet and compact. Let's go."

I weighed my options and decided I could never live with myself if I turned down a beach break to preserve the cleanliness of my shorts.

Arriving a few minutes later at Ocean Road Beach in Bridgehampton, I took a look towards the wet, sandy coastline that would soon be my physical adversary. I didn't see much, because as the overcast day became evening, a dense fog had settled over the beach. But Mr. Rattiner's feet literally hit the ground running and I shrugged my shoulders and followed suit.

I put in the little white iPod earbuds and turned up the melodious melancholy of TV On The Radio, critically-acclaimed indie favorite of NYU students everywhere, and placed foot after foot on the compact sand as the water lapped at my feet. Running in the misty air, it hit me that this was far superior to a concrete street. Accompanying the adrenaline rush of any good run was a certain quality of authenticity. While normally I have to immerse myself in my music to avoid thinking about the burning pains in my legs and feet, I felt more in sync with nature as I ran through the fog and the shallow water. Running barefoot on sand burned in the legs, as it's supposed to, but felt somewhat soothing on my feet, opposed to the banging of Nikes against pavement.

And then I stopped seeing beachgoers and almost anything except for David in front of me and I couldn't help but question if he knew where he was going. My neurotic mind began to wander. If it gets too dark, can we see our way back in this fog? Is he calculating how far we've gone (because I certainly haven't)? But I continued to run, sweat lapping at my eyes. But just as I was repeating, "Wolf Like Me," for another round, David signaled to circle. Relief.

Shortly after turning back, I realized that another advantage to beach running is that it's pretty straightforward – you stay in a straight line. It was on this return line that I saw David start to move inwards onto the softer sand (much more difficult to run on) and as I followed, I realized that he was swerving to give a brief pat on the hand to a man in a beach chair, who just happened to be Dan Rattiner, Editor-in-Chief and Publisher of this very paper. Other families were running around in the area as well, enjoying the beach, even in the dense fog of the evening.

As we got back to our starting point and did pushups on the sand, I noticed that my oxford was stained with sweat and the trendy Marc Jacobs shorts were caked in sand and ocean water. But I didn't really care, because running on the beach is more challenging to your body than concrete and yes, pleasant. But most importantly, it's a reminder of why it's actually good to live out here – not for the large great rooms with blasting AC or for the chance to sport your short shorts, but for the natural authenticity of the coastline and the ability to run alongside it. Oh, look at that, a life lesson learned in just a brief jog, but I spared you the metaphor of seeing through the fog.

Or did I?

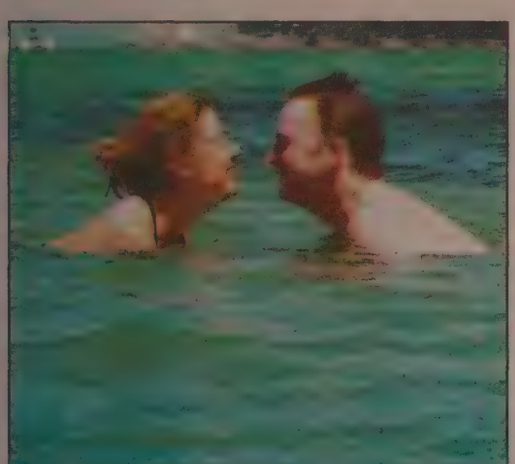
The Benefits of a Quick Ocean Dip

Just as the bite of autumn creeps into the August evening air, you may be packing up your bags. You may be allowing your brain to jump forward a month, to school days and Halloween parades. Thoughts of where you'll spend Thanksgiving may have even begun to crop up in your mind. But if this is the case, you have hit the fast-forward button on your life. It is still August and now is the best time to enjoy the greatest thing summer has to offer: the ocean.

June and July held the promise of a summer ahead, but they also brought the sting of the ocean's bitter bite. Your freshly tanned skin would crawl with goose bumps as soon as you submerged yourself in those chilly Atlantic waves. But now, after many hot summer weeks have sizzled deep into the surface of the ocean, the water temperature has warmed up. It is now the perfect time to incorporate a daily dip into your ritual. According to the National Oceanographic Data Center (NODC), the ocean water at Montauk Point is warmer now than it will be at any other point in the year. At Montauk Point, the water now registers at 70 degrees, up from 67 degrees on July 15.



Swimming in the ocean is not only extremely pleasant this time of year; it is also excellent for your body and your mind. Swimming is an aerobic exercise that keeps oxygen flowing throughout the body for the duration of the swim. Therefore, it improves your overall cardiovascular fitness. At the same time, swimming lowers your blood pressure, lowers cholesterol, raises your energy levels, and helps you lose body fat. Swimming has also been known to help decrease anxiety and stress and alleviate depression.

Also, because your body is made up mostly of water, you are very well supported in the water. Therefore, the whole time you are undergoing this intense workout, your body is well supported. This means there is less stress on the areas of your body you don't want to be overworking, like the joints and bones. This allows you to work harder in the areas that need the workout, like the muscles.

Salt water has beneficial effects on skin, hair, and sinuses too. Salt therapy is often used to help rejuvenate cells and to eliminate toxins. In the 5,000-year old Indian tradition of Ayurvedic medicine, salt water is used to flush out the sinuses. A device called a neti pot is often employed to clear the nasal passageways. This is done by administering warm saltwater into one nostril, and allowing it to flow out the other. But you can get a similarly cleansing effect by simply immersing yourself in the ocean water on a consistent basis, and breathing deeply as you swim.

Salt water has a beneficial impact on breathing and sinuses. Along the line of neti pots, saline solutions are often used in lieu of decongestants to relieve stuffy noses. The saltwater does various things, like removing mucus from the nose, reducing nasal stuffiness, and reducing postnasal drip. Saline also removes 80% of allergens, thins out thickened secretions, and shrinks swollen membranes. If creating a saline solution at home has such an impact, inhaling the benefits straight from the ocean has similar positive effects.

The ocean water is deeply rejuvenating to the skin as well. Even the texture of the water helps keep the skin healthy by acting as an exfoliator, getting rid of dead skin so that healthy, new skin can shine through. Sea salt baths are often recommended by health and beauty experts to help cleanse the pores and detoxify the body. But why spend hundreds of dollars on a special spa treatment when you can get the real thing right outside your back door? For the next few weeks, the water temperatures will remain high and the beaches brilliant, so treat yourself to the ultimate beauty treatment: nature's remedy.

Perhaps the most important benefit the ocean has is the impact it can have on the spirit. There is nothing I find more reassuring than the fact that the tides keep coming in and going out with the same consistency, no matter what state my life is in. So if ever you're feeling overwhelmed, or stressed, or tired, or alone, just go to the shores of that mighty ocean. Every time you return, it will offer you an abundance of gifts.

The Garden At Rock Cottage by Lance Brilliantine

The Perennial Hibiscus

A stroll through East Hampton this weekend showed that the perennial hibiscus is available in local nurseries. These dinner plate-sized blooms add a range of colors from white with crimson centers, to many shades of pink, lavender and red. With their displays of crepe paper-like flowers, these are truly one of the most beautiful of late summer perennials.

Cousin to the tropical hibiscus and Rose of Sharon, the perennial hibiscus is a garden favorite in the northeast. It provides a welcome contrast to the yellows and browns that begin to emerge in late summer. Despite the fact that the plant is a "late starter" in spring, it is one of the most dependable and easily grown perennials for East End gardens.

The perennial hibiscus (also known as Rose Mallow, Swamp Mallow, Dinner plate Hibiscus and Frisbee Hibiscus) displays the largest flowers of any perennial with blooms up to a foot in diameter. Plants begin blooming mid-July and may bloom through October. The blooms last for only one day, but the plant sends forth many buds that bloom sequentially, making them available for many weeks. The display, especially when planted in mass groupings, is quite dramatic.

The perennial hibiscus is a larger plant and requires space to spread. It is suitable for specimen plantings or large, singular groupings, or works well at the back of flower borders. The plant forms sturdy, erect, semi-woody stems and grows three to eight feet tall (pruning during the growing season will control height, provided the plants are not pruned later than the first week in July). Stalks spread out over a wide area – typically two to three feet. Leaves are large, gray-green in color, and ovate and pointed. Lower leaves can sometimes be three-lobed.

The perennial hibiscus is a member of the Malvaceae family of plants. The genus Hibiscus includes both tropical and temperate species. H. moscheutos, the perennial type, is a native perennial that typically grows in marshlands from Georgia to Texas. The plant survives well to Zone 5 and regenerates itself for many years (our experience suggests the plant does well for three or four years before needing replacement).

Hibiscuses have been hybridized since the early 1900s, and this has resulted in a number of widely popular hybrids that include H. coccineus, H. miliaris, and H. grandiflorus. Some of the most beautiful species of hibiscus include the following – "Aquarian," produces 12-inch blooms in lavender-pink; "Crown Jewel," develops a 10-inch bloom of white with maroon center; "Dreamcatcher," displays a 12-inch crepe-like pink; "Old Yella," offers a 12-inch, pale-yellow flower; and "Plum Crazy," a plum-shaded bloom of 10 inches.

Plants are readily available at this time of year from local nurseries and can also be mail ordered. Wittendales in East Hampton and Marders in Bridgehampton have some of the best collections.

Because the native perennial hibiscus grows naturally in swamps, marshes and ditches, it is adaptive to many garden situations where the plant will receive sun and water. We have found the plants grow best where they have moist, rich soil and are exposed to full sun. Copious watering and fertilizing throughout the growing season result in the largest stems, profuse blooms and vivid colors.

In fall, after the frost kills back the leaves, cut stems to about three inches above ground level. Cover the plant with a thick coating of mulch. Uncover the plants beginning mid-May, once the soil has warmed to about 50 degrees, and apply a good coating of organic fertilizer. The plant will send up new stems – usually beginning in June. Prune the stems once, but only after they have reached a height of 14 inches.

Perennial hibiscus holds special interest for the garden. Its large, crepe-like blooms make it a must for every late summer display.

Calm and Cool in the Catskills

Does the perfect setting for a vacation home take your breath away or calm your soul after a hard week of work? Does it conjure up memories of wonderful vacations? As we make those important investment decisions, are we assured the environmental setting today won't change overnight and that the attributes of our dream homes will outlive the first year's mortgage? Don't we love to breathe in, see, smell and feel each new season as it surrounds us? Aren't we all thinking about smarter environmental choices, ready to take a step forward to protect the environment as we embrace its beauty?

Bethel Farms Estates, in the lush, fresh-aired Catskills of Sullivan County offers a design for living that provide all those assurances. The vision of respected land entrepreneur Charles S. Ramat, Bethel Farms Estates extends from childhood memories of the Catskills and the peaceful countenance of his current family home on a nearby farm. The vision offers private gated communities proximate to Bethel Woods performing arts center, and the quaint communities of Jeffersonville, Callicoon and Livingston Manor. From over a thousand acres Ramat owns throughout this area, The Birches in Bethel and The Meadows near Livingston Manor are the first offering five-acre parcels of pristine mountain settings for custom single-family homes. Coming soon are The Crest in Fremont and The Maples in White Sulphur Springs.

In areas zoned for one to one-and-a-half acre development, each parcel is typically 5 acres, designed to mitigate views neighbor-to-neighbor, as it minimizes site clearing and preserves old growth forests and meadows for open space. Covenants protect against future subdivision, protecting privacy and density for the future. Within this preserved land, extensive walking, hiking, biking and cross-country skiing trails are interspersed with viewing stations.

Bethel Farms Estates encourages green and sustainable development to meet the needs of each customized home, and will assist those interested in securing available grants for solar and photovoltaic and other innovative or LEEDs energy features.

Each custom family estate may be designed to meet their needs and interests. Common threads of exterior stone, wood, natural materials and muted earth tones will create a common aesthetic for homes and guest houses that complement the magnificent environmental setting. Regional architects and builders are available, most familiar with local materials, suppliers and labor, to facilitate development on your schedule now or in the future.

Bethel Farms Estates has not only preserved significant open space, it is designed with the interests of the greater community and natural environmental setting in mind. Parcels have been designed to preserve pre-development vistas available to the public as one travels through the general community.

After lingering to draw in the beauty within, Bethel Farms Estates are just minutes from the exceptional cultural offerings of Bethel Woods, the site of the 1969 Woodstock Festival, gourmet restaurants, children's activities and quaint villages perfect for a day of antiquing.

Bethel Farm Estates, less than a two-hour drive north of New York City brings the doorstep of nature and the sweeping beauty of the Catskills within easy reach. Sullivan County land and local development expertise brings gracious country estate lifestyle within the comfort of most budgets. Parcels start at $150,000.

The environment, now and for the future, is the central core design standard at Bethel Farms Estates. Committed to maintaining the area's natural beauty and environmental integrity Bethel Farms Estates both creates a community within and connects to the community beyond as a continuum in the area's natural setting and habitat.

A Smarter Car

In East Hampton, directly in front of Blue and Cream, was a Smart Car tent where hundreds of people gathered and signed up to give these cute, speedy cars a test drive. Mercedes-Benz of Smithtown is going to be one of the first dealerships in America to offer the sweet little mini machine.

If you are an avid traveler, you may have seen these vehicles all over Europe where they are very popular and fashionable because of their great gas mileage, fantastic engineering and, as my British friend Jamie who is out for the summer put it, "Those are wicked…wicked cars."

With Americans being used to larger vehicles, the Smart Car immediately puts you off at first. A part of you believes that it is too small and therefore not safe. However, due to a diamond design, the Smart Car has been given a 4-star crash rating. With the incredible success of the Mini Cooper in America by BMW, the Smart Car, which is made by Mercedes Benz, has its advantages as well. And with gas prices above $3 a gallon in most parts of the country, the Smart Car certainly raises an eyebrow, and will, at least, lure you in for a test drive.

Which is exactly what I did.

At 40 miles to the gallon and more, I wanted to see how this thing drives. I'm not the type of guy that is just going to buy a car because I like the gas mileage. I need to feel good in it, I need to feel like I'm driving and like the style. I want it at a good price and I also need to feel like I'm getting good gas mileage. In other words, I want it all.

I hopped into my white convertible Smart Car and was stunned by the legroom in the vehicles (I'm 6'3"). The engine also sounded fantastic and felt remarkably powerful. I was surprised. This didn't feel like I was in some sort of space aged, super quiet car. I pulled out, switching into the manual mode of shifting and felt really good on the road. The Smart Car feels solid and gives you exceptional handling – similar to a sports car. It also had incredible pickup, which made it really fun to drive. I also enjoyed playing with the steering wheel paddle shifters as I zipped into a high second gear.

Within 30 seconds of driving, I realized why people not only like the Smart Car, but rave about it. This car feels great and is a true display of some of the best automobile engineering in the world. It's a sick little car.

I whipped the car back to Blue and Cream and had a smile on my face. I've test driven a lot of cars and felt really good about the Smart Car, so I decided to check out dollars and cents. The low-end model is going to start under $12,000 and the high-

Just Leave it in The Mudroom!

Mudrooms are as much about mud as sleeping porches are about sleeping. The dynamic little room situated usually at the rear entrance of your house can make life beyond its doors that much nicer. In a clinical sense, it is a decontamination center – removing the negative traces of the great outdoors from your body before you ever enter the home. For you horse people, the mudroom is essentially a tack room for humans – a place for coats, boots, etc.

In the summer the mudroom is generally under utilized. With everyone wearing flip-flops and summer apparel, a place to hang your Barbour coat seems a bit unneeded. At the same time, there are a few uses for the summer mudroom. Let's face it, sand can get everywhere if it isn't kept under control. Children are the number one culprits, but adults also can be blamed. Place a tray of water, ankle high, just outside the mudroom door and then a absorbent, shag mat in the interior. With washed and dried feet, sand shouldn't be a problem in the rest of the house. Hang beach towels from the hooks your fall and winter jackets will eventually use – allowing guests access to towels without having to rummage through linen closets and pestering you. Store umbrellas, Wellingtons and rain coats for those summer showers.

While the summer only utilizes the mudroom to a small degree, the autumn and winter see the mudroom at its fullest. The mudroom has always been, for me, associated with horses. As a child, it was where we strapped on our riding boots, but more importantly took them back off. That room was my mother's only hope for a house that didn't smell like horse droppings - a house that didn't resonate with the clicking of cowboy boot heals. For my brothers and me, it was the first blast of warmth after an entire October day of trail rides and grooming. A place where we could store denim jackets and chaps. The winter months saw snowpants, moon boots, hats, gloves, mittens, scarves, down coats.

To get the mudroom ready for the coming season, make sure your mudroom has at a minimum a baseboard heater for quicker drying of wet boots. If you want to take the next step, the DryGuy DG1 universal boot and glove heater is a great purchase. With four prompts you can warm a pair of boots and gloves for the trip out into the autumn wind, or dry them after a trek in the snow.

You'll need seats as well. If space is a factor, I'd suggest fold down seats that rest flat against the wall when not in use. But if it isn't, a sturdy wooden chair is best. You don't want anything too comfortable because after a hard day in the saddle, you may not want to leave the chair and your family will get worried that you've gone crazy as you spend your entire afternoon sitting in a room smelling of horse chestnuts and worn leather. A bench is great because you can store footwear under it, but the space is also swell for storing firewood - a must for any time of the year.

Hooks are key. Again equestrian themes come to mind. I've seen people use bent horseshoes for coat hooks. They are sturdy, authentic looking and evoke a rural lifestyle. If that's not your cup of tea and you really only use your mudroom in the summer, Frontgate has cast aluminum whale tail shaped hooks which are more fitting.

Getting boots off with cold hands or full arms is a huge pain but a good boot remover can even make yanking those knee-high Wellies a piece of cake. On the opposite end, putting boots on can also be a hassle, so try pick up boot hooks. Keep a few light weight jackets around as well. If you're just heading out for a second or two, they're great to have handy.

A little trick I like is installing a Dutch door. In cooler months, when air conditioning isn't needed and there are not mosquitoes, leaving the topside open allows for ventilation and an old-world aesthetic.

Now is the time to get your mudroom sorted out. With the cooler, wetter weather looming in the near future, you'll need a first defense from bringing the outside in. You'll see, with a little work, your mudroom will be more than a place to just store your boots.

Real Estates by Diane Strecker

Estates listed over the $25 million mark have drawn the most attention this season. Commercial properties and the very high-end market are the sales that have continually made news. Many wonder what may be available on the lower side of the market, if there is such a thing. In the Hamptons, the lower side may represent real estate under ten million dollars. Although we constantly hear about the exchanges made by celebrities and Wall Street moguls, very little is reported about properties that range from one to ten million.

A million dollars on the East End buys very modest accommodations by Hamptons standards — a small cottage if you are lucky. But as values reach into the two million range in most East End towns, one can find a home of substantial size and proportion. Moderately priced homes, particularly those around the 2.5 million mark are plentiful, with more than 1,000 listings throughout the East End. Of course the radius to any specific body of water is the key to pricing property here on the East End. The size of a home might shrink within a certain price range as it draws nearer to the water. Yet beautiful homes can be found in the in this price range and currently there are quite a few to choose from. From Montauk to Westhampton there are homes listing below ten million, even oceanfront properties and smaller homes in the estate sections.

In Montauk one can still buy a substantial sized beauty with water views in all directions. A four bedroom, 4.5 bath, newly constructed traditional on almost 2 acres can be purchased at the $2.5 million price point. The 3000 sq. ft. property includes a carriage house – this is listed with the Tuma Agency in Montauk.

In Southampton Village $2.5 buys a storybook cottage that has 3 bedrooms and two baths. The square footage is half of that of the Montauk listing but is located in the heart of Southampton. The cottage that has been completely renovated is nearby Lake Agawam and also has a pool. It is listed with the Corcoran Group's Southampton office at $2,495,000.00.

In Bridgehampton, a 6 bedroom, 4 baths, well-maintained 1860 Victorian on two acres is also priced at $2.5 million. This home has six working fireplaces and a heated pool. It is listed with Century 21 Agawam Albertson in Southampton. The ocean is about ten minutes away and is walking distance to downtown Bridgehampton.

When homes come up in price to the $6 or $7 million mark one can find waterfront in areas such as Shelter Island where a bay front with a deep-water dock can be found at $6,995,000.00. The 4 bedroom, 2.5 bath, Dutch Colonial on Smiths Cove is set on a little more than an acre and includes 180 feet of bay frontage. It is listed with Sotheby's International Realty in Bridgehampton. On East Hampton's Georgica Pond, at the very same price a beautiful traditional shingle style is for sale that has 6 bedrooms and 6 baths. The home is not located the pond but is 5000 sq ft, has a pool and pool house and a three-car garage. There is a library and multiple fireplaces and a grand foyer and staircase. Prudential Douglas Elliman of East Hampton has the listing.

The Hamptons Cottages and Gardens Idea House is for sale at $7,250,000.00. The unique shingle style traditional in Amagansett has 6 bedrooms and 6.5 baths. It is a fine example of what the Hamptons has to offer in this price range. It was designed by renowned architect Steve Semes and includes everything that a discerning buyer may desire. The home was host to the 2007 Designer Idea House event and was open for public viewing this summer. The 6700 sq. ft. home is set on just shy of two acres is listed with Sotheby's International in Bridgehampton.

end model is going to be around $15,000. So these cars are very affordable.

I imagined that this car would be great to zip around town in the Hamptons, but I also found it to be an excellent open road vehicle because of its speed, safety and pleasure to drive.

Honestly, since the test drive, I can't get the car out of my head. It is a great vehicle that offers excellent engineering and has a style of its own. I highly recommend that you check out the car for yourself and see what I'm talking about. It is going to be available at Mercedes-Benz of Smithtown, a major dealer of Mercedes Benz's on Long Island, in 2008. They are, of course, answering questions about the car and are extremely informative and pleasant. Call 631-265-2204 for more information.

WHITE LINES, GESTAPO AND 20/20

Dear Dan,

After reading the second story this week about Barbara Williams and her encounter, or should I say, abusive treatment, by the Quogue police I was prompted to call her and offer my support and sympathy.

I have been pulled over by the Quogue police for going over the white line. I go over the white line and it has nothing to do with drinking alcohol-it is very hard to stay in the lines with all of the curves in the road 100% of the time.

The police there have truly created a state of paranoia and they are like the Gestapo. Everyone locally talks about them not just "the summer people." The word on the street is to drive around Quogue and people drive up to 27 to avoid going on Montauk Highway and dealing with them. The fact that they could barge into this woman's house is beyond comprehension. The fact that the mayor and police chief do not change this climate and think everything is fine is horrible. To think people are afraid to sign their names on letters regarding this situation for fear of retribution is a sad state of affairs.

I think it has the makings for a great 20/20 story or 60minutes. It is time something changes there as I thought of moving there one day and am so turned off by the Nazi like police force I wouldn't dare. I work with a woman who went out at 10 p.m. to pick up her daughter in her pajamas (every mother or dad has done that) and was pulled over in her mini-van and questioned if she had drugs! The only drugs she had were her breast cancer fighting drugs-how insane is that? This is what is really going on.

Too afraid to leave my name

LUSH HUSH

Dear Dan,

I just read the article, "On The Scene," (7/20/07 issue) with all the glowing praise about the Ross School event, its ambience, "lush scenery," and "'tar studded" attendees. While the overall premise of the $15,000 series price seems noble, I wonder just how much of the proceeds will go to the school. To quote last week's Independent newspaper – "a small portion' will. Also in the 7/20 issue of the Wall Street Journal, which had a brief headline of the event, it was opted that tickets to a TAFKAP, er, Prince concert in Switzerland were $107. He also distributed 100,000 copies of is new 'CD' free in a London Sunday newspaper. Obviously, charity in the Hamptons is much more expensive than the rest of the world! Lastly, I hope your infamous with and most interesting stories will not be dulled by the sale of the paper!

THREE'S COMPANY

Dear Dan,

Air Taxi Operators/Commuters:

I am visiting my hometown of Mattituck, staying with family. While I have no problem with having the service available, please fly over your South Fork properties, not over the North Fork. It is VERY ANNOYING having a helicopter fly over every 15-30 minutes, destroying our quality of life. People here can't even have a conversation without being interrupted by the noise, although the downdraft makes for a nice breeze!

If you insist on flying over the Mattituck area, at least go high enough so we can't hear you.

DA BLOG

Dear Dan,

I read where Dan's was purchased, but happy to see still the same Dan's. Your website is terrific and your blog as well. (Hula-Hoop was fun!) I remember with fondness when you published a chunk of my award winning short story "Wintering at Montauk" a few years back. From my Canio's collection. I still am still writing fiction (have a couple of Pushcart special mentions for my short stories, but not brass ring as yet), as well as blogging for the National Book Critics Circle Board blog, Critical Mass at www.bookcriticscircle.blogspot.com (I am NBCC Vice President/Membership and head of this year's fiction awards judging).

WHERE IS THE CREW?

Dear Dan,

Dear David,

Your July 20 article on crewing could not have been timelier. In May I moved from the suburbs of Philadelphia to the City's Rittenhouse Square Area. I have always been curious about one of the major attractions of our city, the beauty and history of Boat House Row. As a recent widow I thought it would be fun to find out why. Now I know! As a novice I am still in a single scull but can share your feeling of the slide, the swoosh and tranquility and of course my aching body.

My daughter and her family have a home in East Hampton and I too would to have a place to row or at least have the joy and pleasure of watching the experts.

Many thanks for the article.

CHEF OF DOCKSIDE

Dear Dan,

I enjoyed reading your article about Billy Joel, a personal favorite of my son and daughter. I especially enjoyed the fact that you dined at Dockside. A dear friend of mine is the chef there, Thomas Jacobs. He is creative and extremely extraordinary in his culinary skills. I hope you'll go back and interview him. He is also an eligible bachelor that the ladies may want to know about.

I love Sag Harbor, and am thrilled that Billy Joel, his wife, and you Mr. Rattiner, dine there regularly.

A faithful reader, I have forgiven you for the subway article.

NEW YORK, NEW YORK

Dear Dan,

I am writing about the article by Fred Katz regarding "How They'll Fix Country Road 39." His statement that this construction is being done so "New Yorkers can get to their country houses faster" is totally unfounded and inaccurate.

The road is being widened so those of us who work on the East End can have a somewhat bearable commute. This is evidenced by the fact that the cones are placed during "work" rush hour, not Thursday and Friday afternoons when the "New Yorkers" try to get to their summer homes faster. So much for accurate and unbiased reporting.

Police Blotter

Poor Lighting

The police pulled over a man in Hampton Bays for "not having proper lighting" on his vehicle. No clear description was given on what this meant. nonetheless the man was arrested and brought to the police station, where he was released on $100 bail. We're guessing it had more to do than a broken taillight.

Bros Before Throws

Two brothers were throwing rocks, spitting at a car and screaming obscenities at a woman and her husband at their house in East Hampton. The owner of the house filed a police report. In defense of the brothers, they are certified idiots.

iPhone

Well it had to start happening sooner or later. An Apple iPhone was reported stolen from a woman in Wainscott who claims to have left the $700 gadget near a bench. After she made the report, she was quoted saying, "iMad."

Shot With A BB

Two windows of a woman's house in Sag Harbor were shot out by what appeared to be a BB gun. The woman will have to replace the windows, but in the mean time, she has purchased a pellet gun so that she can respond the next time she is attacked.

Screen Door

A not so bright criminal thought that he would break into a house by cutting through the screen door. Unfortunately for him, he realized that there was a locked door behind it and scurried off. Police have been requested to patrol the neighborhood for further activity of the stupid nature.

Green Light

A man in Sag Harbor was caught driving around with a green light on his roof that was flashing like a siren. Police pulled him over for having the light and then they discovered drugs inside the man's vehicle. Police arrested the man and let him drive in a car with a red siren.

Brooklyn Fireworks

An eighteen-year-old man was found to be in possession of illegal fireworks after he was acting drunk and disorderly in Southampton. Police arrived at the scene and confiscated the fireworks. No word on whether or not anybody is going to get to set them off.

Too Much Partying

A woman called police to report that her car had been damaged. The woman attended a party in East Hampton and apparently somebody thought it would be fun to start dancing on top of the roof, which received significant damage, but the bright side is that the woman now has an absolutely fabulous Hamptons party story.
